War's Quickening Influence Felt in Every Phase of Industry Declares Lloyd-George Who Sees A New Britain Emerging Victorious From Conflict—Allies Are United.

(Copyright, 1916, by the International News Service.)
By Telegram to The Freeman.

London, Jan. 24.—Few people will quarrel with the statement that the outstanding figure of the war in Great Britain is David Lloyd-George, minister of munitions. For a month past it has been the aim and ambition of every newspaper man on this side, either permanent or visiting, to get Lloyd-George to talk for publication. Up till today he had steadfastly refused, but, at my earnest solicitation and mainly, of course, because he wanted to, Mr. Lloyd-George consented to answer some questions dealing with the situation today after eighteen months of war.

The first question was whether England is really putting its whole weight into the war? Minister Lloyd-George replied: "England is preparing to put its whole weight into the war and Germany will feel it in a very short time. It is an effort such as England has never made before—a truly prodigious effort. In the days before the war she had no such weight in the world, but now she has one of the greatest armies; and in a very short time it will be about the best equipped army in the world."

A New Industrial Britain.

"But that is not all. A new Britain is now being developed—a new industrial Britain. Under the pressure of war we are improving and quickening our industrial resources to an extent which would have been impossible but for the demands of this conflict. "Let me give you an example," remarked the munitions minister. "In the first place we have introduced scores of millions worth of automatic machinery which will have an enormous effect upon our industries when the war is over. In addition to that we are adding to our already great industrial army of skilled workers and shall need them in the future to replace the ravages of war in this country."

Efficiency a Fruit of War.

"Therefore, so far from being the exhausted Britisher in everything that constitutes real and true wealth, we shall be a better organized, better equipped, better trained, and what is more important, perhaps, a better disciplined nation. In fact, we shall be national and not a congeries of conflicting interests."

There is not a more essentially pacific man in the world than Lloyd-George, but he loves liberty more than life. "As you know," he said, when I mentioned this point, "I have always opposed settlement of international disputes by organized force. I fought this doctrine for three years when I thought my country applied it in South Africa and was in favor of Britain entering this war because I saw in it the only means of destroying this hideous German menace to peace and civilization."

"Everything that has happened in eighteen months of the war tends to confirm me in what I have called 'the great decision.' You will remember that Mazzini said war is the greatest of crimes when it is not waged 'for the sake of a great truth to enshrine or a great lie to entomb.' Yes, the allies are engaged in a mighty effort to dig the grave of that wicked lie that 'might is right,' and mark you, we shall not cease to strive to our uttermost until we have dug the grave deep and wide and can abandon our united toll in the firm conviction that we are insured beyond all possible doubt against its resurrection."

Germany—Her Two Sides.

Lloyd-George is not one of those perverted perspiring patriots who imagine they are doing their country a service by decrying everything German. Talking on this phase, he said: "I think America and all of us should realize there were two Germanys before the war. On one hand there was the industrial, commercial and intellectual Germany, and in a most remarkable way she had blended the three elements."

"Now, that Germany," said Mr. Lloyd-George with emphasis, "was rendering a great service to civilization. It was conquering the world by the success of its methods and example. That conquest would have proved a very genuine blessing; it would have been the means of saving some of the social evils of humanity are spreading. As an ardent social reformer, I freely confess I was learning a good deal from that direction of Germany, particularly in the direction of municipal and national organization."

"But," continued the minister in changed tones, "this is my other point. Side by side with this Germany which we admired was the military Germany."

"These two Germanys could not live together in rapid and beneficent development. This first Germany meant the permanent overthrow of old barbarous Germany, for, in spite of the fact that it employed weapons of science and culture, it was not the less barbarous."

Militarism Real Menace.

I recalled the interview given by

Mr. Lloyd-George on New Year's Day, 1914, in which he made a plea for sanity in armaments, believing the common sense of the industrial classes—capitalists or labor—had risen against the organized insanity of swollen armaments, or the race for supremacy. Mr. Lloyd-George then said:

"Germany's military classes saw this fact just as clearly as I did. They made a most desperate effort for that very reason to establish their predominance. Germany started spending money on its army as well as its navy. I saw this could only mean that the military class was determined to strike at the earliest possible moment and that the real menace of Germany was once more to be found in her army."

Lloyd-George just a year ago at the treasury, when he was chancellor of the exchequer, told me "We are going to win the war." I reminded him of this today. He replied vigorously:

"And I am still of that opinion."

To a question about the strength and solidity of the alliance, he answered:

"The allies are as firmly united now as at the beginning of the war."

Home Trouble a Bogey.

When I hinted at the possibility of industrial trouble at home Lloyd-George retorted:

"I refuse to believe that such a thing will occur. I am convinced that those who would entertain for a moment the idea of thus hampering our gallant troops at the front are but a very small fraction of workers. As for industrial compulsion, it is merely a bogey employed by those who would create trouble in order to further their objects."

In spite of Lloyd-George's firm confidence in victory for the Allies, I asked him what he prognosticated if defeated:

"If the military class in Germany should win," he said with great vehemence, "their triumph will be permanent. Make no mistake. We should witness the triumph of an ideal, a pernicious ideal, of course, but a potent one. It is just the old idea of organized force which has been the basis of all military empires."

"That Germany of quiet, pacific development, the Germany that was concerning herself with improvement in the condition of her people, the Germany that was increasing her democratic vote millions at each successive election, would vanish from the sight of this generation and in its place what should we see?"

"We should see a Germany of triumphant warriors seeking whom it could devour, looking out for fresh spheres, or shall I say fresh hemispheres to conquer."

No one could feel a greater obligation of debt to the fleet than does Lloyd-George.

Fleet Savior of London.

"If we overthrow German militarism now," he said, "it will because our command of the sea has given us time to organize and to make good our unpreparedness. You have only to imagine what would have happened if command of the sea had not been ours, or if it has been wrested from us. We would have been overrun as easily as the Balkan peninsula within three months, three months, mind of the declaration of war."

"London would have fallen as quickly as Belgrade. France would have made a gallant resistance; so would Russia, but the armies on the north and eastern frontiers of France could have been turned by descents on her south and west coasts."

"If Germany were to win the war, Europe would be helpless. Let us never forget that indisputable fact, Russia and France would not be permitted to build up great armies to defend their frontiers and command of the sea would be taken from Great Britain."

"What about the Monroe Doctrine?" I inquired. "I cannot help wondering," replied Lloyd-George with a mischievous twinkle in his eye, "if in that event it would fare better than the British fleet."

PORTO RICANS ARE MAKING PROGRESS

Rev. Dr. McDonald Shows Kingston Congregation the Achievements and Educational Advancement Since U. S. Occupation of Island.

The vast strides taken by the people of Porto Rico since 1899 when the island was taken over by the United States were related in an interesting manner by the Rev. E. A. McDonald on Sunday evening in the Roundout Presbyterian Church when he delivered an illustrated lecture on "Beautiful Porto Rico." The views shown were from photographs taken by Dr. McDonald during his residence on the island.

When the United States took possession of Porto Rico, but very few of the natives could read and write. There were no public schools and only the children of the richer classes had acquired even a slight education. As soon as this government took over the island, the speaker made plain, things began to change and a number of school teachers from this country were sent to Porto Rico and public schools were built all over the island in which the great majority of children now attend school.

With education went good roads and in the past fifteen years macadam highways have been built through the island which tended to increase the amount of produce raised for export purposes. Large automobile trucks have taken the place of the old method of transporting produce from the inland districts to market. Formerly a man rode down to the market on horseback carrying his produce in two huge hampers or baskets. In the past fifteen years, exports have increased eight-fold in value. The imports have also increased and Porto Rico at the present time is buying more from the United States than Russia or Austria or several other countries did before the war.

The Presbyterian Church is carrying on a great work in the island and pictures of the churches erected and of the congregations were shown. Since the United States took possession of the island the morality, which was lax among the natives, has improved. This was due to the fact, the speaker said, that this government gave the Presbyterian and other protestant ministers the right to marry the natives who came to have the ceremony performed. Dr. McDonald said that the Spanish Church had imposed a fee of $20 for performing the marriage ceremony and as the men were only receiving about fifty cents a day for twelve hours work they could not afford to pay the fee and as a result men and women lived together without having the marriage ceremony performed. He declared that with the advent of the Protestant Church in the island the morals of the people improved as the Protestant ministers performed the marriage ceremony free of charge and many who had been living together without being married came and had the ceremony performed. Dr. McDonald said that he had united over two hundred couples in marriage while on the island.

In the past few years probably the largest sugar mill in the world has been erected on the island and the export of sugar is one of the largest industries. The soil is remarkably productive and the farmer raised three different crops each year from the same ground. Tobacco, coconuts, bananas and other produce are also raised.

Dr. McDonald showed a number of views of the large school for young men and women that the Presbyterian Church maintains in Porto Rico. So many applications are received

NEW ROAD TO MONTGOMERY.

Orange County Cities Expect Old Turnpike Improvement Soon.

Ten years ago E. Smith Webb, then supervisor of the town of Walkkill, introduced in the Orange county board of supervisors a resolution for the construction of a state road between Middletown and Montgomery, over what is known as the old Montgomery Turnpike, leading out from Wickham ave. Since that time other have made repeated efforts to get the matter in working shape before the state department of highways, but there has been delay after delay, until the people most interested began to fear that the road was not to be constructed in their life-time. All the obstacles have now been removed, however, and the road is assured, it being expected that the contract for building the same will be let in February. The mileage to be constructed is 18-100 from the city limits to Montgomery, which will shorten the distance between Middletown and Newburgh about seven miles.

TRYING TO RETAIN REV. MR. VOIGHT

Members of Trinity M. E. Church, Newburgh, are signing a petition for the return of the Rev. W. W. Voight as pastor of their church.

When an assistant to the late Rev. Dr. Hite was being selected, and Mr. Voight was called from Accord, it was with the understanding, as a member of the official board stated to a press representative, that he could not be considered as in line for the permanent designation as pastor. He possibly would not have been mentioned had Dr. Hite lived, as the later would have gone to the conference as the regular pastor of the church, and at the conference have asked to be placed in the list of retired or supernumerary preachers. This would have left the field open for some one of the older preachers. But the death of Dr. Hite placed the eloquent young preacher at the helm, and he has been gaining friends and strength weekly. The petitions are being signed freely, and will be presented at the church conference by the friends of Mr. Voight, who claim they represent the majority of the congregation. If the church conference does not recommend his return the matter will be taken direct to the bishop at conference.

GO-TO-CHURCH SUNDAY ATTRACTED THOUSANDS

Union Revival Services Auspicious Feature of Successful Religious Innovation—People Actually Turned Away from St James M. E. Church Evening Gathering.

Kingston's first "Go to Church Sunday" was just as successful as it has been in other places, and resulted in an increased attendance at all the city churches, the congregations at the five churches under whose auspices a three weeks' revival will be held being especially large. Pulpit announcements, notices in The Freeman and placards displayed in store and shop windows calling attention to "Go to Church Sunday," in addition to the efforts of the staff of personal workers which has been organized in connection with the religious revival, gave notice to everyone in town that they were expected to attend service at some church on Sunday.

On Sunday the congregations of the First Dutch, Fair Street Reformed, St. James and Clinton Avenue Methodist and the Albany Avenue Baptist Churches united in the opening revival services at St. James' Church, where the church auditorium and Sunday school room were filled to their capacity and many people were unable to gain admission. The speaker of the evening was the Rev. Dr. J. L. Leeper, pastor of the First Dutch Church, who delivered an eloquent and forceful sermon which was listened to with close attention.

Great Chorus Choir.

A feature of the revival will be a chorus of 125 voices, under the leadership of I. H. Meredith and Grant C. Tullar, whose hymn books will be used by choir and congregation. Both Messrs. Meredith and Tullar have been engaged in evangelistic work for twenty years. Mr. Meredith was unable to be here on Sunday, and a song service preceding Sunday evening's sermon was led by Mr. Tullar.

No meeting will be held tonight, but the union revival services will be resumed Tuesday night at St. James' Church. If that church is unable to accommodate the entire congregation, meetings will also be held in the Fair Street Reformed Church.

The pastors of the five churches mentioned occupied seats on the platform Sunday evening at St. James' Church and all took part in the services.

The Rev. George Cranston of the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church offered the opening prayer, invoking God's blessing in all its fullness and power upon the meetings to be held during the weeks to follow.

The Rev. Arthur S. Cole, of the First Baptist Church read the scripture lesson, being part of the 5th Chapter of Matthew, after which the Rev. Frank B. Seeley, pastor of the Fair Street Reformed Dutch Church, stated that they were facing the answer to their own prayers; that God had answered much larger than they had hoped, when for the first time in the city of Kingston, people were turned away from a house of worship. He also stated there would be no service on Monday evening, but there would be services on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, at 7:30 o'clock.

Rev. Leeper's Sermon.

The Rev. Dr. J. L. Leeper of the First Dutch Reformed Church then preached a powerful, heart-searching sermon, beginning by saying: "Have you ever been lost? I was, in the great Adirondack forest, and I remember well how glad I was when I found myself. The glory of the Bible is, that it enables a man to find where he is. It's the whole inspiration of this immortal volume. This text will enable you to find out this very night, where you are; whether you are in the way of life or, in the way of death; this is the text. 'Be not deceived, God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. If we sow thistles, we shall reap thistles; if we sow love we shall reap love; and if we sow hate we shall reap hate; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap, and if we sow 20 bushels of seed we will reap 20 times as much as if we planted but one bushel. He that soweth sparingly shall reap sparingly. Every harvest has its own proportion and that sowing will not produce another kind of harvest either. The soldier has to pay the price for his glory. If you want his glory you have to pay his price. The religious man has to pay his price, by taking up his cross and following Jesus Christ. The drunkard must part with his cup, others with their sins."

Chickens Home to Roost.

"The highest law of nature is that of cause and effect—like producing like. You sow seed—the plant produces no other kind, that's a principal that is true in natural history and in individual history. You see men enjoying the fruits of industry, others suffering from the sins of youth. Ashes fly back in the face of him who throws them—chickens come home to roost.

"The present is the seed time; the harvest will follow. The good we do produces a harvest of good and the evil we do, produces a harvest of evil."

"The Master said, 'That for every idle word a man speaks he shall give an account in the day of judgment.' In the language of a great orator, 'Our deeds still follow us.' Next week and next year, a million years hence, you before me will be the identical person you are before me, reaping in the eternity what you are sowing in time. Sometimes the penalty for wrong doing seems to be delayed, but it will come as sure as the night brings a shadow, somehow and somewhere, will be punished."

"The mills of God grind slowly, But they grind exceeding small. Though with patience He stands waiting, With exactness grinds He all."

"A tree that falls to the ground during a hurricane has been preparing for that fall for years."

True of Spiritual Man.

"That you will reap just what you have sown is as true of the mental as well as of the spiritual of the unregenerated man."

"Plato says, 'sin and punishment go through life with their heads together.'"

"Upon the authority of the apostle, a man who has accepted Jesus Christ as his saviour—of the process that's going on in his soul, Paul says, 'He that soweth life everlasts.'"

"What he means is perfectly plain, for he says: 'Let us not be weary in well doing for in due season we shall reap if we faint not. Every good deed in Christ will receive its proper reward; it is life becoming more life; it is the soul developing itself. They that turn many to righteousness shall receive their reward. Every man shall receive his own reward, with interest—but HIS OWN reward, beautifully illustrated in Christian character. In the Christian life, begin with faith, believe, you no sooner cast yourself upon Him than you get peace. Then we are led to love Him who first loved us. Thus the Christian grows up into the full stature of Jesus Christ. 'The fruit of the spirit is love, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law. Every blade of grass is a seed planted, growing, thus he that soweth to the spirit shall reap life everlasting. If one sows to the flesh he must not expect to reap spiritual blessing. Win the world but remember in so doing you lose your soul; every sin must be paid for. 'Be not deceived, God is not mocked, whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. If you sow to the wind you shall reap the whirlwind—if you sow to the spirit you shall reap life everlasting.'"

"Every soul in this house is building for one of two rewards—the reward of life or the reward of death. Into higher joy on the one hand, or greater misery on the other."

The audience was largely composed of men, many of whom were compelled to stand in the rear of the edifice, and all listened to this eloquent appeal with the deepest interest.

Audience at Song Service.

A short address was given by Mr. Tullar in regard to the song service to be conducted at the close of the regular service, inviting as many as wished to do so to remain. Several hundred remained to enjoy and take part in the singing. Mr. Tullar closed this service with a very earnest prayer for souls unsaved in Kingston.

Child Sent to Institution.

Through efforts of the S. P. C. C. a two and one half years old boy has been taken from Mr. and Mrs. Charles Crawford of Spring Glen and sent to an orphan asylum. Crawford is 60 years of age and his wife is 21. They were married 14 months ago. The father of the child is in an Albany jail. The child was in a filthy condition, scantily clad and poorly cared for.

Large automobile trucks have taken the place of the old method of transporting produce from the inland districts to market. Formerly a man rode down to the market on horseback carrying his produce in two huge hampers or baskets. In the past fifteen years, exports have increased eight-fold in value. The imports have also increased and Porto Rico at the present time is buying more from the United States than Russia or Austria or several other countries did before the war.

The Presbyterian Church is carrying on a great work in the island and pictures of the churches erected and of the congregations were shown. Since the United States took possession of the island the morality, which was lax among the natives, has improved. This was due to the fact, the speaker said, that this government gave the Presbyterian and other protestant ministers the right to marry the natives who came to them to have the ceremony performed. Dr. McDonald said that the Spanish Church had imposed a fee of $20 for performing the marriage ceremony and as the men were only receiving about fifty cents a day for twelve hours work they could not afford to pay the fee and as a result men and women lived together without having the marriage ceremony performed. He declared that with the advent of the Protestant Church in the island the morals of the people improved as the Protestant ministers performed the marriage ceremony free of charge and many who had been living together without being married came and had the ceremony performed. Dr. McDonald said that he had united over two hundred couples in marriage while on the island.

In the past few years probably the largest sugar mill in the world has been erected on the island and the export of sugar is one of the largest industries. The soil is remarkably productive and the farmer raised three different crops each year from the same ground. Tobacco, coconuts, bananas and other products are also raised.

Dr. McDonald showed a number of views of the large school for young men and women that the Presbyterian Church maintains in Porto Rico. So many applications are received

NEW ROAD TO MONTGOMERY.

Orange County Cities Expect Old Turnpike Improvement Soon.

Ten years ago E. Smith Webb, then supervisor of the town of Walkkill, introduced in the Orange county board of supervisors a resolution for the construction of a state road between Middletown and Montgomery, over what is known as the old Montgomery Turnpike, leading out from Wickham ave. Since that time other have made repeated efforts to get the matter in working shape before the state department of highways, but there has been delay after delay, until the people most interested began to fear that the road was not to be constructed in their lifetime. All the obstacles have now been removed, however, and the road is assured, it being expected that the contract for building the same will be let in February. The mileage to be constructed is 9 1/2 miles from the city limits to Montgomery, which will shorten the distance between Middletown and Newburgh about seven miles.

The Sunshine Society would ask that any one having a high-backed rocking chair of medium size and comfortable for an invalid, which they could spare, would notify Mrs. W. TRYING TO RETAIN REV. MR. VOIGHT

Members of Trinity M. E. Church, Newburgh, are signing a petition for the return of the Rev. W. W. Voight as pastor of their church.

When an assistant to the late Rev. Dr. Hite was being selected, and Mr. Voight was called from Accord, it was with the understanding, as a member of the official board stated to a press representative, that he could not be considered as a candidate for permanent designation as pastor. He possibly would not have been mentioned had Dr. Hite lived, as the later would have gone to the conference as the regular pastor of the church, and at the conference have asked to be placed in the list of retired or superannuated preachers. This would have left the field open for some one of the older preachers. But the death of Dr. Hite placed the eloquent young preacher at the helm, and he has been gaining friends and strength weekly. The petitions are being signed freely, and will be presented at the church conference by the friends of Mr. Voight, who claim they represent the majority of the congregation. If the church conference does not recommend his return the matter will be taken direct to the bishop at conference.

Against Federal Road Bill.

Washington, Jan. 24.—Congressman Edmund Platt has emphatically expressed himself as being opposed to the goods road bill now before congress. The bill proposes federal aid for roads through all the states. Mr. Platt brands it as a "pork barrel" measure whereby those states that have done comparatively little in the way of road improvement will benefit largely at the expense of New York and other states that have done much in road construction.

Interest Keen in Races.

Saturday's horse-racing on Albany avenue drew a large crowd of horse devotees. Many fast races were run and interest was keen because of the speedy horses on the track. Winsome, owned by Fred Brink, was the most popular of the racers on account of her beauty and speed.

GO-TO-CHURCH SUNDAY ATTRACTED THOUSANDS

Union Revival Services Auspicious Feature of Successful Religious Innovation—People Actually Turned Away from St. James M. E. Church Evening Gathering.

Kingston's first "Go to Church Sunday" was just as successful as it has been in other places, and resulted in an increased attendance at all the city churches, the congregations at the five churches under whose auspices a three weeks' revival will be held being especially large. Pulpit announcements, notices in The Freeman and placards displayed in store and shop windows calling attention to "Go to Church Sunday," in addition to the efforts of the staff of personal workers which has been organized in connection with the religious revival, gave notice to everyone in town that they were expected to attend service at some church on Sunday.

On Sunday the congregations of the First Dutch, Fair Street Reformed, St. James and Clinton Avenue Methodist and the Albany Avenue Baptist Churches united in the opening revival services at St. James' Church, where the church auditorium and Sunday school room were filled to their capacity and many people were unable to gain admission. The speaker of the evening was the Rev. Dr. J. L. Leeper, pastor of the First Dutch Church, who delivered an eloquent and forceful sermon which was listened to with close attention.

Great Chorus Choir.

A feature of the revival will be a chorus of 125 voices, under the leadership of I. H. Meredith and Grant C. Tullar, whose hymn books will be used by choir and congregation. Both Messrs. Meredith and Tullar have been engaged in evangelistic work for twenty years. Mr. Meredith was unable to be here on Sunday, and a song service preceding Sunday evening's sermon was led by Mr. Tullar.

No meeting will be held tonight, but the union revival services will be resumed Tuesday night at St. James' Church. If that church is unable to accommodate the entire congregation meetings will also be held in the Fair Street Reformed Church.

The pastors of the five churches mentioned occupied seats on the platform Sunday evening at St. James' Church and all took part in the services.

The Rev. George Cranston of the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church offered the opening prayer, invoking God's blessing in all its fullness and power upon the meetings to be held during the weeks to follow.

The Rev. Arthur S. Cole, of the First Baptist Church read the scripture lesson, being part of the 51st Chapter of Matthew, after which the Rev. Frank B. Seely, pastor of the Fair Street Reformed Dutch Church, stated that they were facing the answer to their own prayers, that God had answered much larger than they had hoped, when for the first time in the city of Kingston, people were turned away from a house of worship. He also stated there would be no service on Monday evening but there would be services on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, at 7:30 o'clock.

Rev. Leeper's Sermon

The Rev. Dr. J. L. Leeper of the First Dutch Reformed Church then preached a powerful, heart-searching sermon, beginning by saying: "Have you ever been lost? I was, in the great Adirondack forest, and I remember well how glad I was when I found myself. The glory of the Bible is that it enables a man to find where he is. It's the whole inspiration of this immortal volume. This text will enable you to find out this very night, where you are; whether you are in the way of life or, in the way of death; this is the text: 'Be not deceived, God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth unto his own flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth unto the spirit, shall of the spirit reap eternal life.'"

"Our future grows out of the present. Just as the plant grows from the seed. If we sow flowers we reap flowers; if we sow thistles, we reap thistles; if we sow love, we reap love; and if we sow hate we reap hate; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap, and if we sow 20 bushels of seed we will reap 20 times as much as if we planted but one bushel. He that soweth sparingly shall reap sparingly. Every harvest has its own proportion and that sowing will not produce another kind of harvest either. The soldier has to pay the price for his glory. If you want his glory you have to pay his price. The religious man has to pay his price, by taking up his cross and following Jesus Christ. The drunkard must part with his end, others with their sins."

Chickens Home to Roost.

"The highest law of nature is that of cause and effect—like producing like. You sow seed—the plant produces no other kind, that's a principal that is true in natural history and in individual history. You see men enjoying the fruits of industry, others suffering from the idleness of youth. Ashes fly back in the face of him who throws them—chickens come home to roost. "The present is the seed time; the harvest will follow. The good we do produces a harvest of good and the evil we do, produces a harvest of evil."

"The Master said, 'That for every idle word a man speaks he shall give an account in the day of judgment.' In the language of a great orator, 'Our deeds shall follow us.' Next week and next year, a million years hence, you before me will be the identical person you are before me, reaping in the eternity what you are sowing in time. Sometimes the penalty for wrong doing seems to be delayed, but it will come as sure as the night brings shade—he somehow and somewhere will be punished."

"The mills of God grind slowly, But they grind exceeding small. Though with patience He stands waiting, With exactness grinds He all."

"A tree that falls to the ground during a hurricane has been preparing for that fall for years."

True of Spiritual Man.

"That you will reap just what you have been sowing is as true of the mental as well as of the spiritual, and the unregenerated man."

"Plato says, 'sin and punishment go through life with their heads together.'"

"Upon the authority of the apostle, a man who has accepted Jesus Christ as his saviour—of the process that's going on in his soul, Paul says, 'He that soweth life everlasting.'"

"What he means is perfectly plain, for he says, 'Let us not be weary in well doing for in due season we shall reap if we faint not. Every good done in Christ will receive its proper reward; it is life becoming more life; it is the soul developing itself. They that turn many to righteousness shall receive their reward. Every man shall receive his own reward, with interest—but HIS OWN reward, beautiful instruction in Christian character. In the Christian life, begin with faith, believe, you no sooner cast yourself upon Him, than you get peace. Then we are led to love Him who first loved us. Thus the Christian grows up into the full stature of Jesus Christ. 'The fruit of the spirit is love, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law. Every blade of grass is a seed planted, growing, thus he that soweth to the spirit shall reap life everlasting. If one sows to the flesh he must not expect to reap spiritual blessing. Win the world but remember is so doing you lose your soul; every sin must be paid for. 'Be not deceived, God is not mocked, whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. If you sow to the wind you shall reap the whirlwind—if you sow to the spirit you shall reap life everlasting.'"

"Every soul in this house is building for one of two rewards—the reward of life or the reward of death. Into higher joy on the one hand, or greater misery on the other."

Audience at Song Service.

A short address was given by Mr. Tullar in regard to the song service to be conducted at the close of the regular service, inviting as many as wished to do so to remain. Several hundred remained to enjoy and take part in the singing. Mr. Tullar closing this service with a very earnest prayer for souls unsaved in Kingston.

The child was found in a filthy condition, scantily clad and poorly cared for.

DO THIS FIRST—YOU!

You know, and every physician knows, that when any sickness has passed, whether it be throat trouble, organic disturbances, contagious diseases, or even a severe cold, a relapse is feared, because sickness robs the system of Nature's resistance and leaves it subject to lingering germs.

Drugs never build up a worn-out body—only food can do that, and the first thing to take after any sickness is the concentrated, blood-making oil-food in Scott's Emulsion, which feeds the tissues, benefits the blood and strengthens both lungs and throat.

Physicians prescribe Scott's Emulsion after sickness. Nurses everywhere advocate it. Scott's is pure medicinal food, without alcohol or drugs.

Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J.

Single tells how to bring up children. What Mrs. Bean thinks about it. It looks like rain. Solo, "It's the Little Things That Count." Hampton and Travers try to get the spring back. Green discovers a relative. The convention postponed. Why the auto wouldn't run. Final chorus, "The Road to Happy Town." At the close of the entertainment sandwiches, coffee, ice cream and cake will be served. Admission, fifteen cents; children, ten cents.

Some of the ladies of the village held a meeting at Miss Julia Hasbrouck's on Wednesday afternoon for the purpose of organizing a Union Mission Study Class.

Mrs. Duncan and Mrs. G. H. Davis, who have been ill, are improving.

There will be a meeting held this evening at the Hebrew Free School, corner of Spring and Post streets, at 8 o'clock of all those interested particularly of the young ladies who are desirous of helping in the work, and any others who desire to assist are invited to be present. Full announcement of the method of organization will be made during the course of the week.

President Wilson has issued the following proclamation setting aside Thursday, January 27, as the day upon which the people of the United States may make such contributions toward the relief of the Jewish war sufferers as they feel disposed. The president's proclamation in full reads as follows:

President Wilson's Proclamation.

Whereas, I have received from the senate of the United States a resolution, passed January 6, 1916, reading as follows:

Whereas, in the various countries now engaged in war there are nine millions of Jews, the great majority of whom are destitute of food, shelter and clothing; and

Whereas, millions of them have been driven from their homes without warning, deprived of an opportunity to make provision for their most elementary wants, causing starvation, disease and untold suffering; and

Whereas, the people of the United States of America have learned with sorrow of this terrible plight of millions of human beings and have most generously responded to the cry for help when ever such an appeal has reached them; therefore be it

Resolved, that, in view of the misery, wretchedness and hardships which these nine millions of Jews are suffering, the president of the United States be and he is hereby requested to designate a day on which the citizens of this country may give expression to their sympathy by contributing to the funds now being raised for the relief of the Jews in the war zone.

And whereas, I feel confident that the people of the United States will be moved to aid the war-stricken people of a race which has given to the United States so many worthy citizens:

Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, president of the United States, in compliance with the suggestion of the senate thereof, do appoint and proclaim January 27, 1916, as a day upon which the people of the United States may make such contributions as they feel disposed.

The central committee in New York city is distributing 15,000 pocket dime savings banks and the banks are collected by the treasurer of the branch committee who turns over the receipts to the central committee. Each bank is numbered. Tag days, button days and other ways of raising money are also being adopted throughout the country.

Just what plan will be adopted by the local committee will be announced later.

BUREAU OF SOCIAL SERVICE.

Hearty Cooperation Pledged at Supreme Court Chambers Meeting.

A most interesting meeting of the advisory committee of the Bureau of Social Service was held at supreme court chambers, Friday evening, January 21, at which there was a good attendance, the chairman of the committee, P. J. R. Clarke, presiding. The purpose and methods of the bureau were presented to the committee by the president, the Hon. G. D. B. Hasbrouck, and by Sam Bernstein, chairman of the executive committee. This was followed by a lengthy and interesting discussion of case work by the committee, with the secretary, Mrs. Laura Mac Millan.

Those present were most enthusiastic over the work the bureau is trying to do and pledged their heartiest co-operation. The meeting then adjourned for a month.

A CHANGE OF TACTICS.

How It Worked In the Case of a Discouraged Salesman.

The following method of gaining assurance is told in the American Magazine. It is the experience of a salesman who could not sell his goods because he allowed himself to be discouraged at initial attempts. It has wide application everywhere:

"I am a commercial traveler who conquered the habit of despondency. Every one who sells goods knows how fierce the competition. When I took this job six years ago it seemed absolutely overwhelming. I didn't sell anything to speak of and made up my mind that I couldn't, though I kept on making the round of the groceries. There seemed to be a thousand salesmen just ahead of me. I grew very bitter at the thousand and everybody else. Whenever I entered a store it was with the firm conviction that I should not get an order. I looked dull-eyed at the merchant and said gloomily:

"Anything in my line?" at the same time reaching for the doorknob. They didn't try to detain me.

"One day in conversation with an old drummer, a shrewd veteran of the road, I opened my heart with a savage complaint about the thousand salesmen, my advance guard. He puffed his cigar a moment, his eyes twinkled and he slapped me on the shoulder.

"I know," he said. "I had 'em ahead of me once. They raised Cain with me until I chased 'em to the rear. Take my advice, boy, and get up to the head of the procession and let the other fellows do the worrying."

"I thought it over, and it dawned on me that it was a question of viewpoint. I had formed a habit of picturing myself at the tail of the line, though in reality we were going in a circle and my position was as good as any. Then I changed my tactics and formed a new habit—the habit of thinking of myself as the leader, the very first man in the territory. Just as an experimenter I went out the next day believing that I should get orders. I pulled my order book and pencil the moment I entered a store and began to name certain goods.

"Sugar!" I cried, looking the grocer expectantly in the eye, as much as to say that I could see the empty barrel behind his counter. And the barrel was empty! It worked so well in the first store that I tried more vigorously in the next, and the merchant came down freely. It was almost uncanny the way I guessed the items he needed. I went out on the sidewalk and laughed aloud. And I actually sold more goods that day than I had sold before in three weeks.

"Well, the firm raised my salary instead of firing me, as they had planned to do, and I still insist that I am the first man over the route. I tell you, right habits of thought are worth money—sometimes a fortune."

Spirit of the Home.

I never realized before how rare indeed is the real home—the temple reared to house a family life, with its altar dedicated to parenthood. I saw that it is not enough to have furniture "good," to have colors "safe," not enough to show a pretty, well appointed house to the world. A real home must be a setting for a living, loving, sorrowing and conquering man and woman. It is not enough to study textures, plans and building materials. It is just the old story of the letter and the spirit. The creative spirit can make any home beautiful, but the most perfect house is a dead shell unless it houses loving, growing life—Emily Newell Blair in Country Life Magazine.

The Footmen's Gallery.

There was in one part of the theater where in bygone days smoking was permitted the footmen's gallery, where servants in attendance on masters viewing the theater were admitted free. But the occupants of the footmen's gallery were so noisy and they so frequently hissed out of existence plays that their masters approved of that the privilege was withdrawn, and the gallery became the "shilling gallery," which has kept up to a great extent the traditional privilege of outspoken criticism originally exercised by footmen.—London Chronicle.

Rich as Croesus.

The boys were bragging about their parents. "I bet my father is richer than your father," said one. "He has to pay lots and lots of money for taxes every year." "That's nothing," retorted the other. "My father is so rich that he can afford to hire a lawyer to fix things so he don't have to pay any taxes."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

FOOD AND CHARACTER.

How Different Diets Bring Out Various Traits in Nations.

It is proved that today the wheat eating nations lead the meat eating nations. There are some interesting observations on the subject.

The succulence and flavor of meat depend not only upon careful cooking, but on what the animal was fed with. In the same way the meat and food we eat influence our characters.

Englishmen are "beef fed," and to that they owe their stolid and tolerant characters, slow to move to enthusiasm, with a great liking for compromise and toleration and a big facility for forgiveness.

The porridge of the Scot makes him argumentative and opinionated, and the restless vivacity of the Irishman is due to his potato diet.

A famous actor carried his belief in the influence of food so far as to vary his menu according to the character he was playing, eating pork for tyrants, beef for murderers and mutton for lovers.

This may have been taking matters to extremes, but it is a fact that mutton lovers are generally of a quiet temperament and given to sentiment, while big beef eaters are more often than not of a choleric, fierce character.

Observations of regular pork eaters have not justified the allegation, that they are tyrannical, but certainly pork is different from other meats, and adored by those who have been extraordinarily fond of pork chops. Fat bacon produces a lethargic character—slow in thought and action.

It is alleged that vegetarianism makes clear thinkers, but moody characters.

Last, but not least, big bread eaters are of a dominating character and become natural leaders.

Whites of two eggs, butter or lard size of walnut, one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of milk, one and one-fourth cupful of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a little salt and vanilla. Sift the sugar into the beaten whites of eggs. Make three layers. For top icing use confectioner's sugar wet with the clear coffee saved.

Coffee Filling.—Two teaspoonfuls of coffee, two-thirds cupful of cold water. Steep ten minutes and strain in coffee cup, saving one tablespoonful in another dish and fill cup with milk. Mix yolks of two eggs, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one-half cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of melted butter. Add to coffee and cook in double boiler as you would a boiled custard.

China Book Ends.

Book ends are always interesting, and unusual ones are sought after as gifts for all occasions. There is a new set in china which is particularly pretty. The design shows one book lying flat, its covers of dark gray, with yellow edged leaves, and another book, standing upright on the lower book, its covers of the same color, with the government surveyors have been able to divert 200,000 more acres from proper uses to nothing at all.

HOW WIDE IS A ROAD?

Much Waste Land Upon Which Weeds Grow.

In the middle states a road is four rods wide—sixty-six feet—says the Country Gentleman. It is made so by decree of the government survey. Of course any man who is reasonably sober can drive a small automobile comfortably on a strip of land one rod wide. If two men are quite sober they can pass safely on one rod of road. Indeed, the makers of macadam for state roads rarely pretend to build road beds more than eighteen feet wide, of which the marginal two feet may be counted for salvage.

A farm wagon is four feet eight inches wide from wheel to wheel—call it five feet for good measure. Add one foot for hubs, and still three such vehicles can be placed abreast in the eighteen foot road. In the four rod government highway with a little

It sounds extravagant, and it is. Each mile of government roadway contains eight acres of land. Much of it is perfectly good land, capable of growing 500 bushels of corn to the acre. Counting one rod as enough for proper road uses, six acres in each mile are pure waste. Thousands of miles of the best highways in England, France and Germany are only one rod wide, but if that seems too stingy for your Uncle Samuel call it two rods for us, and we are still throwing away four acres on each mile. Multiply these figures for the state of Iowa by the 101,000 miles of public road and we have 416,000 acres of the best farming land in the world just wasted. In Kansas, where the same system prevails, the government surveyors have been able to divert 200,000 more acres from proper uses to nothing at all.

This unused space serves only to grow weeds. The roadsides are often the greatest weed museum in a good farming country. Each year they produce enough seed to keep the neighboring farms perpetually supplied. In some places, to be sure, the owners of adjoining fields take into their own hands the care of the roadsides. They mow the weeds. Sometimes they even grow hay in place of weeds and mow that. Occasionally one plows the idle

ONE POET OUT OF PLACE.

When Wordsworth, In Borrowed Finery, Attended a Royal Function.

It is not easy to imagine Wordsworth, the gentle poet, in the midst of the glittering artificialities of court life. Yet he once actually presented that picture. How slender was the tie that bound Wordsworth to the court during his seven years' tenure of the laureateship may be judged, says W. Forbes Gray in "The Poets Laureate," by the fact that he wrote no official poems and that on only one occasion did he leave his retreat in the heart of his beloved lake land to attend a court function. In May, 1845, he obeyed an imperative summons of the lord chamberlain to attend a state ball at Buckingham palace.

There must have been, as Professor Knight remarks, "something not a little incongruous in the severely simple, almost austere, poet of seventy-five years attending a ceremonial of this kind." Wordsworth went not only to the ball, but to the queen's levee, in a court dress belonging to Samuel Rogers and wearing a sword once owned by Sir Humphry Davy.

"What," exclaims Haydon, "would Hazlitt say now? The poet of the lakes in bagwig, sword and ruffles!" Haydon also remarks that the fitting of the court dress was no easy matter. "It was a squeeze, but by pulling and hauling they got him in. Fancy the high priest of mountain and of flood on his knees in a court, the quiz of the courtiers, in a dress that did not belong to him, with a sword that was not his own and a coat that he had borrowed." Haydon could not bear to "associate a bagwig and sword, ruffles and buckles with Helvellyn and the mountain solitudes."

On returning home the laureate wrote an interesting account of his novel experience to his American friend, Professor Reed: "The reception given me by the queen, at her ball, was most gracious. Mrs. Everett, the wife of your minister, among many others, was a witness to it, without knowing who I was. It moved her to the shedding of tears. This effect was in part produced, I suppose, by American habits of feeling, as pertaining to a republican government. To see a gray haired man of seventy-five years, kneeling down, in a large assembly, to kiss the hand of a young woman, is a sight for which institutions essentially democratic do not prepare a spectator of either sex and must naturally place the opinions upon which a republic is founded and the sentiments which support it in strong contrast with a government based and upheld as ours is."

Pineapples.

The pineapple is a solidified blossom, say the horticultural experts, and it is pineapple blossom time from June to October in Hawaii, where 7,000 acres are given over to the cultivation of this fruit. Pineapples are planted in three ways—for shipment raw, for canning and for juice. If the planter wants large, perfect specimens of the fruit he sets about 5,000 plants to the acre. The uniform smaller disks that you find in the cans are the result of closer planting, while the planter who desires only juice sets his plants still closer.—Youth's Companion.

"Well, how much do I owe you?" asked the man.

"Nothing," answered the jeweler. "This isn't a professional treatment. This is a coroner's inquest."

KINGSTON, N. Y., JAN. 24, 1916.

It being a well-established fact that legislators eat and drink, the natural consequence is an investigation as to how much they eat and drink when the State pays for it. As an epidemic, the fever for investigation runs second only to the grip and the germ appears to have affected even Tammany Hall. The Thompson legislative committee probing the down State Public Service Commission, turned in expense vouchers for a $5,200 hotel bill which carried the names of members for various sums expended in food, lodgings and theater tickets. This was last spring and the long interim ensuing has enabled a pretty sizable wave of indignation to roll up among certain New York city members of the committee who ate and slept at home during the period covered in the accounts wherein they were charged with items for meals and rooms. Their consternation was succeeded by a personal investigation and now there is promise of a grand jury investigation. It reminds us of the story of the fish that had been hooked and then a larger fish bolted it. An even larger fish swallowed the second and so on. Of course, it is only a fish story, but reports indicate that some pretty big fish have been stirred into activity in New York.

Whether or not the State is going to get its bait back does not seem to be any part of the proceedings. It is true that the indefensible practice of charging up expenditures of public money in hit or miss fashion is not new. This committee expense item is not a flea-bite compared to the thousands squandered in gratifying Empire State vanity at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Another long-standing abuse in legislative practice is the professional mourning party that follows the death of a member, a committee being named to pay the last honors as well as the last cent of the considerable sums appropriated for that purpose. Such a graft is most difficult to eradicate. Investigating and junket committees are privileged institutions, no matter what party may be in power. Politicians are noted for thoroughness in expense matters. In the New York city eruption, the investigating committee should not only explain but should take the consequences. Its labors need not necessarily be terminated. Indeed, it might be a particularly valuable body to start on the trail of the expense vouchers of other legislative committees.

War, and the foreign trade expansion incident thereto, have had their usual yeast-like influence upon prices for the necessities of life in this country and shoe leather is about to soar in the upward wake of food and wearing apparel. Foot and shoe manufacturers at a meeting in Massachusetts have predicted a raise of 50 cents a pair in the prices for shoes this year. Leather is much higher and there has been a gradual increase in labor cost, according to the shoe men. The upward tendency of food prices has not been so striking as the sensational advance in drugs and all of these bear a direct relation to war's effect on the increased cost of living. Somebody has estimated that the increase in the prices for necessities this year, put at the extremely low figure of $10 per capita, would be a billion dollars a year added on to the country's burden of war. Everybody in the world has to pay his or her bit toward this war business. This country must do its part and the increasing cost of living shows one of the principal methods by which our citizens are paying the shot.

Athletics have come to be such a part of the big business of our universities that the announcement of Yale's athletic management going into the hands of receivers sounds so much a matter of course as to scarcely occasion comment outside of college circles. Disagreement over matters of policy between graduates and the student management is the cause for this step. President Hadley states that as long as the alumni advisers were harmonious and as long as the college had a large share of athletic success, the system operated by graduates and undergraduates worked well. When failure took its dismal course, however, and disagreements resulted, the receivership resulted. It is easy to perceive that Yale's misfortune is no different from that which would follow in any business wherein the same friction developed. It is too bad that the students were not given more opportunity to work out the salvation of their athletic management under adverse conditions. It takes failure to bring out staying qualities. Instead of a receivership, President Hadley might better have put it up to the students themselves to face and work out their own problems, the same as they will have to do in later life.

In view of the serious condition of the National treasury it is amazing that the Roads Committee has actually reported favorably a House bill appropriating $25,000,000 for improving the highways. While this sum is big enough to make new taxes necessary, it is too small to accomplish the proposed purpose. In a forcible speech, Representative Edmund Platt of Poughkeepsie pointed out the fact that $25,000,000 comes to only $12 a mile for the roads which are to be improved, while "really good roads cost a thousand times that much, and even bad roads cost a hundred times as much." As Mr. Platt accurately stated, the bill is of the "pork barrel" variety. It has no redeeming feature. We do not see how any honest Congressman can vote for it.

WINTER CARE OF HOGS.

Important That the Animals Be Kept Free From Parasites.

No one thing is more evident in the care of hogs in winter on the better class of farms than the attention now devoted to keeping the herd free from both external and internal parasites. There is no longer any question that a herd of hogs infested with worms, lice and other pests which sap their vitality are much more susceptible to attacks of hog cholera than those which are in healthy condition, says Orange Judd Farmer.

In the beginning of the winter season the hoghouse should have a thorough going over. First of all it should be Duroc-Jersey swine are pork making animals of the highest order. They have good feet and the large bone necessary for carrying a carcass to market or to produce and farrow a large litter. cleaned, not in a casual manner, but with scrupulous care, and all litter, cobs and straw removed should be piled up and burned. The inside of the house should then be sprayed with some good disinfectant, preferably mixed with whitewash, which will at the same time improve its appearance. One man has the novel system for small hoghouses of piling straw inside and setting fire to it, the heat doing a thorough job of disinfecting. This is a somewhat hazardous method, however.

New, clean straw should invariably be put in for bedding, and this should be changed frequently. The spray pump used for disinfecting should not be put aside until the next season, but should be kept in working condition and used every little while. It offers a cheap form of health insurance on the stock. The concrete feeding floor, concrete hog wallow and the various types of dipping tanks all aid in keeping the herd healthier in winter. On some of the best hog farms the entire herd is dipped once a month regularly, regardless of whether any disease is present or not. This is a good, wholesome practice and not expensive.

The use of the hog oiler or oil rubbing post is another simple and very effective treatment which is particularly convenient, as hogs do all the work themselves and require no special attention.

CARE OF PREGNANT EWES.

Glover Hay and Roots Make an Excellent Winter Feed.

An excellent ration is composed of clover hay, two to three pounds, and roots, two to three pounds per day. This is sufficient except when ewes are thin, in which case a meal mixture also should be fed at the rate of about a half pound per day. A good meal mixture consists of oats, two parts; bran, one part, and linseed oil cake or peas, one part. Ewes lambing in February, March or April should be well prepared with the use of the above ration.

The most economical use of roughages is the secret of successful sheep feeding. If good clover hay is absent the cheaper roughages must be supplemented with grain. Pea straw, unthrashed, is an excellent substitute for clover hay. Pea straw, thrashed, must be supplemented with grain. Fine grass hays may require an addition of some grain in order to take the place of clover hay. It would be better to feed coarse grass hays to some other class of stock.

Ensilage may take the place of roots to within a month of lambing, at which time ensilage should be stopped and roots gradually decreased until after lambing.

For feeding sheep the roots may be either mangels, turnips or sugar beets, except in the case of rams, where turnips only should compose the root ration. —Dominion Experiment Station Bulletin.

Getting Sheep on Full Rations.

When grain has been fed while sheep are on pasture it is an easy matter to change from pasture to yard and put on fattening rations. Beginning with a fourth pound of grain daily, the amount may be gradually increased by a fourth of a pound the second week and so on. At the end of the fourth week the animals should be cleaning up a pound or more of grain each day. By the end of two months a daily allowance of one and a half to two pounds may be fed.

It is seldom advisable to feed more than two pounds of grain a head daily. The good shepherd watches his sheep and observes the first indication of bad appetite. When noticed he corrects the trouble at once by cutting down the food supply. —Orange Judd Farmer.

Tall effects in trimming are favored this spring. In fact, the taller the trimming the smarter the wearers. Flower clusters propped up with millinery wire is one form of trimming that is decidedly smart and new. Many of the hats are trimmed with loop bows of ribbon of one kind or another. The hat illustrated is rather small, with narrow veiling brim. The white grosgrain is arranged in an unusual manner, giving the effect of a helmet as it towered up. A smart pearl pin stands vertically in front.

Later Day Sayings
of Benjamin Franklin

"Since thou art not sure of a minute, throw not away an hour," declared old Dr. Benjamin Franklin in his celebrated almanac, and this is another of the wonderfully potent sayings of that hard-headed old philosopher which it would be well if the men and women of today would commit to mind and take to heart and put into practice.

While this saying might possibly have been intended to apply principally to the ethical, or religious, side of humanity, it is not impossible that the old philosopher had in mind its bearing upon commercial activities, for he was always urging hard work and thrift upon the youth of his day,

JEW ORGANIZE FOR WAR RELIEF

Permanent Organization Effected and Officers Elected—Effort to be Made to Raise Money on Thursday.

At a mass meeting held at the synagogue of the Congregation Achim on West Union street on Sunday afternoon, a permanent Jewish relief organization was effected and following officers were chosen: president, Samuel Stern; vice president, Louis Amdur; financial secretary, Selig Cohen; corresponding secretary, Rabbi Moses Eckstein; treasurer, Louis Lankisky; executive committee, the Messrs. Mary Abraham, Yetta Furman, Rose Klein, Minnie Yallum, and the Messrs. Max Jacobson, Koenig, Morris Kaplan, Sam Klein, Abe Saffron, and Rabbi Eckstein and Miller.

There will be a meeting held this evening at the Hebrew Free School, corner of Spring and Post streets, at 8 o'clock of all those interested particularly of the young ladies who are desirous of helping in the work, and any others who desire to assist are invited to be present. Full announcement of the method of organization will be made during the course of the week.

President Wilson has issued the following proclamation setting aside Thursday, January 27, as the day upon which the people of the United States may make such contributions toward the relief of the Jewish war sufferers as they feel disposed. The president's proclamation in full reads as follows:

President Wilson's Proclamation.

Whereas, I have received from the senate of the United States a resolution, passed January 6, 1916, reading as follows:

Whereas, in the various countries now engaged in war there are nine millions of Jews, the great majority of whom are destitute of food, shelter and clothing; and

Whereas, millions of them have been driven from their homes without warning, deprived of an opportunity to make provision for their most elementary needs, causing starvation, disease and untold suffering; and

Whereas, the people of the United States of America have learned with sorrow of this terrible plight of millions of human beings and have most generously responded to the cry for help when ever such an appeal has reached them; therefore be it

Resolved, that, in view of the misery, wretchedness and hardships which these nine millions of Jews are suffering, the president of the United States be respectfully asked to designate a day on which the citizens of this country may give expression to their sympathy by contributing to the funds now being raised for the relief of the Jews in the war zone.

And whereas, I feel confident that the people of the United States will be moved to aid the war-stricken people of a race which has given to the United States so many worthy citizens;

Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, president of the United States, in compliance with the suggestion of the senate thereof, do appoint and proclaim January 27, 1916, as a day upon which the people of the United States may make such contributions as they feel disposed.

Thursday the Day.

The central committee in New York city is distributing 15,000 pocket dime savings banks and the banks are collected by the treasurer of the branch committee who turns over the receipts to the central committee. Each bank is numbered. Tag days, button days and other ways of raising money are also being adopted throughout the country. Just what plan will be adopted by the local committee will be announced later.

BUREAU OF SOCIAL SERVICE.

Hearty Co-operation Pledged at Supreme Court Chambers Meeting.

A most interesting meeting of the advisory committee of the Bureau of Social Service was held at supreme court chambers, Friday evening, January 21, at which there was a good attendance, the chairman of the committee, F. J. R. Clarke, presiding. The purpose and methods of the bureau were presented to the committee by the president of the bureau, G. D. R. Hassbrouck, and by Sam Bernstein, chairman of the executive committee. This was followed by a lengthy and interesting discussion of the work of the committee, with the secretary, Mrs. Laura Mac Millan.

Those present were most enthusiastic over the work the bureau is doing to do and pledged their hearty co-operation. The meeting then adjourned for a month.

A CHANGE OF TACTICS.

How it Worked in the Case of a Discouraged Salesman.

The following method of gaining assurance is told in the American Magazine. It is the experience of a salesman who could not sell his goods because he allowed himself to be discouraged at initial attempts. It has wide application everywhere:

"I am a commercial traveler who conquered the habit of despondency. Every one who sells goods knows how fierce is the competition. When I took this job six years ago it seemed absolutely overwhelming. I didn't sell anything to speak of and made up my mind that I couldn't, though I kept on making the rounds of the groceries. There seemed to be a thousand salesmen just ahead of me. I grew very bitter at the thousand and everybody else. Whenever I entered a store it was with the firm conviction that I should not get an order. I looked dull-eyed at the merchant and said gloomily:

"Anything in my line? at the same time reaching for the doorknob. They didn't try to detain me.

"One day in conversation with an old drummer, a shrewd veteran of the road, I opened my heart with a savage complaint about the thousand salesmen, my advance guard. He puffed his cigar a moment, his eyes twinkled and he slipped me on the shoulder.

"I know," he said. "I had 'em ahead of me once. They raised Cain with me until I chased 'em to the rear. Take my advice, boy, and get up to the head of the procession and let the other fellows do the worrying."

"I thought it over, and it dawned on me that it was a question of viewpoint. I had formed a habit of picturing myself at the tail of the line, though in reality we were going in a circle and my position was as good as any. Then I changed my tactics and formed a new habit—the habit of thinking of myself as the leader, the very first man in the territory. Just as an experiment I went out the next day believing that I should get orders. I pulled my order book and pencil the moment I entered a store and began to name certain goods.

"Sugar!" I cried, looking the grocer expectantly in the eye, as much as to say that I could see the empty barrel behind his counter. And the barrel was empty! It worked so well in the first store that I tried more vigorously in the next, and the merchant came down freely. It was almost uncanny the way I guessed the items he needed. I went out on the sidewalk and laughed aloud. And I actually sold more goods that day than I had sold before in three weeks.

"Well, the firm raised my salary instead of firing me, as they had planned to do, and I still insist that I am the first man over the route. I tell you, right habits of thought are worth money—sometimes a fortune."

Spirit of the Home.

I never realized before how rare indeed is the real home—the temple reared to house a family life, with its altar dedicated to parenthood. I saw that it is not enough to have furniture "good," to have colors "safe," not enough to show a pretty, well-appointed house to the world. A real home must be a setting for a living, loving, sorrowing and conquering man and woman. It is not enough to study textures, plans and building materials. It is just the old story of the letter and the spirit. The creative spirit can make any home beautiful, but the most perfect house is a dead shell unless it houses loving, growing life.—Emily Newell Blair in Countryside Magazine.

The Footmen's Gallery.

There was in one part of the theater where in bygone days smoking was permitted the footmen's gallery, where servants in attendance on masters visiting the theater were admitted free. But the occupants of the footmen's gallery were so noisy and they so frequently hissed out of existence plays that their masters approved of that the privilege was withdrawn, and the gallery became the "shilling gallery," which has kept up to a great extent the traditional privilege of outspoken criticism originally exercised by footmen.—London Chronicle.

Rich as Croesus.

The boys were bragging about their parents. "I bet my father is richer than your father," said one. "He has to pay lots and lots of money for taxes every year." "That's nothing," retorted the other. "My father is so rich that he can afford to hire a lawyer to fix things so he don't have to pay any taxes."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Meet the Voice Within.

Why should we ever go abroad, even across the way, to ask a neighbor's advice? There is a nearer neighbor within us, incessantly telling us how we should behave. But we wait for the neighbor without to tell us of some false, easier way.—Thoreau.

FOOD AND CHARACTER.

How Different Diets Bring Out Various Traits in Nations.

It is proved that today the wheat eating nations lead the meat eating nations. There are some interesting observations on the subject.

The succulence and flavor of meat depend not only upon careful cooking, but on what the animal was fed with. In the same way the meat and food we eat influence our characters.

Englishmen are "beef fed," and to that they owe their stolid and tolerant characters, slow to move to enthusiasm, with a great liking for compromise and toleration and a big facility for forgiveness.

The portledge of the Scot makes him argumentative and opinionated, and the restless vivacity of the Irishman is due to his potato diet.

A famous actor carried his belief in the influence of food so far as to vary his menu according to the character he was playing, eating pork for tyrants, beef for murderers and mutton for lovers.

This may have been taking matters to extremes, but it is a fact that mutton lovers are generally of a quiet temperament and given to sentiment, while big beef eaters are more often than not of a choleric, fierce character. Observations of regular pork eaters have not justified the allegation that they are tyrannical, but certainly pork is different from other meats, and noted bullies have been extraordinarily fond of pork chops. Fat bacon produces a lethargic character—slow in thought and action.

It is alleged that vegetarianism makes clear thinkers, but moody characters. Last, but not least, big bread eaters are of a dominating character and become natural leaders.

Ice Cream Cake With Coffee Filling.

Whites of two eggs, butter or lard size of walnut, one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of milk, one and one-fourth cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a little salt and vanilla. Sift the sugar into the beaten whites of eggs. Make three layers. For top layer use confectioner's sugar wet with the clear coffee saved.

Coffee Filling.—Two teaspoonfuls of coffee, two-thirds cupful of cold water. Steep ten minutes and strain in coffee cup, saving one tablespoonful in another dish and fill cup with milk. Mix yolks of two eggs, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one-half cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of melted butter. Add to coffee and cook in double boiler as you would a boiled custard.

China Book Ends.

Book ends are always interesting, and unusual ones are sought after as gifts for all occasions. There is a new set in china which is particularly pretty. The design shows one book lying flat, its covers of dark gray, with yellow edged leaves, and another book, standing upright on the lower book, its early open. The ends are quite heavy enough for all purposes, and the coloring of the china is particularly attractive.

HOW WIDE IS A ROAD?

Much Waste Land Upon Which Weeds Grow.

In the middle states a road is four rods wide—sixty-six feet—says the Country Gentleman. It is made so by decree of the government survey. Of course any man who is reasonably sober can drive a small automobile comfortably on a strip of land one rod wide. If two men are quite sober they can pass safely on one rod of road. Indeed, the makers of macadam for state roads rarely pretend to build roads more than eighteen feet wide, of which the marginal two feet may be counted for selva.

A farm wagon is four feet eight inches wide from wheel to wheel—call it five feet for good measure. Add one foot for hubs, and still three such vehicles can be placed abreast in the eighteen foot road. In the four rod government highway with a little

It sounds extravagant, and it is. Each mile of government roadway contains eight acres of land. Much of it is perfectly good land, capable of growing 500 bushels of corn to the acre. Counting one rod as enough for proper road uses, six acres in each mile are pure waste. Thousands of miles of the best highways in England, France and Germany are only one rod wide, but if that seems too stingy for your Uncle Samuel call it two rods for us, and we are still throwing away four acres on each mile. Multiply these figures for the state of Iowa by the 101,000 miles of public road and we have 416,000 acres of the best farming land in the world just wasted. In Kansas, where the same system prevails, the government surveys have been able to divert 333,200 more acres from proper uses to nothing at all.

This unused space serves only to grow weeds. The roadsides are often the greatest weed museum in a good farming country. Each year they produce enough seed to keep the neighboring farms perpetually supplied. In some places, to be sure, the owners of adjoining fields take into their own hands the care of the roadsides. They mow the weeds. Sometimes they even grow hay in place of weeds and mow that. Occasionally one plows the idle roadside and plants it to corn along with the abutting field.

It isn't his land, to be sure, but ought it not to be? Some day we shall learn in America the simple lesson learned long ago in older lands—that when a road is wide enough to carry the traffic it need not be any wider. Then we can economize on road maintenance and convert to the uses of agriculture many thousands of acres now ingloriously idle.

Texas Plans Highway.

The good road building movement which has swept the south since the inauguration of the Dixie Highway association movement has spread into Texas with the same feverish activity and interest that has been displayed further east. So tense has become the interest in Texas that the Texas Good Roads association, just as did the Dixie Highway association, has found it necessary to assume an attitude of "strict neutrality" in the selection of the route for highways which it plans to build.

A new highway will be known as the San Antonio-Houston highway. The first link to be completed is to be a part of the southern national highway. So warm has been the competition between the various points between the two termini of the highway that the Texas association has deemed it advisable to issue a card stating its position of "strict neutrality." It must be said for the Texas association, however, that it has gone the other highway association in Dixie one better. In that it has been able to capitalize the enthusiasm of the different competing sections to enormous advantage.

The plan of the Texas road builders has been to designate three tentative routes between San Antonio and Houston. It is up to the sections through which these routes pass to complete them. The first of these routes satisfactorily completed will be named as the official route and will be formally designated as the southern national route.

New Shell Road In Texas.

Beaumont and Kountze, Tex., soon will be connected by a shell road to cost $75,000. The road already is shelled from Pine Island bayou to Beaumont. A highway commission has been selected to act in conjunction with the commissioners' court in the expenditure of this $75,000.

Bearded Freak.

One of the earliest of the American bearded freaks was Louis Jasper, who lived in southern Virginia at about the time of the close of the Revolutionary war. His beard was nine and a half feet long and correspondingly thick and heavy. He could take his mustache between his fingers and extend his arms to their full length and still the ends of the mustache were over a foot beyond his finger tips.—Exchange.

Growing Bodies Require Much Food.

Growing bodies have the most insatiable heat, therefore require the most food, for otherwise their bodies are wasted. In old persons the heart is feeble and therefore they require little fuel, as it were, to the flame, for it would be extinguished by much. On this account, also, fevers in old persons are not equally acute, because their bodies are cold.—Health Culture

ONE POET OUT OF PLACE.

When Wordsworth, in Borrowed Finery, Attended a Royal Function.

It is not easy to imagine Wordsworth, the gentle poet, in the midst of the glittering artifices of court life. Yet he once actually presented that picture. How stunner was the fact that bound Wordsworth to the court during his seven years' tenure of the laureateship may be judged, says W. Forbes Gray in "The Poets Laureate," by the fact that he wrote no official poems and that on only one occasion did he leave his retreat in the heart of his beloved lake land to attend a court function. In May, 1845, he obeyed an imperative summons of the lord chamberlain to attend a state ball at Buckingham palace.

There must have been, as Professor Knight remarks, "something not a little incongruous in the severely simple, almost austere, poet of seventy-five years attending a ceremonial of this kind." Wordsworth went not only to the ball, but to the queen's levee, in a court dress belonging to Samuel Rogers and wearing a sword once owned by Sir Humphry Davy.

"What," exclaims Haydon, "would Hazlitt say now? The poet of the lakes in bagwig, sword and ruffles!" Haydon also remarks that the fitting of the court dress was no easy matter. "It was a squeeze, but by pulling and hauling they got him in. Fancy the high priest of mountain and of flood on his knees in a court, the quiz of the courtiers, in a dress that did not belong to him, with a sword that was not his own and a coat that he had borrowed." Haydon could not bear to "associate a bagwig and sword, ruffles and buckles with Helvellyn and the mountain solitudes."

On returning home the laureate wrote an interesting account of his novel experience to his American friend, Professor Reed: "The reception given me by the queen, after I had been most graciously Mrs. Everett, the wife of your minister, among many others, was a witness to it, without knowing who I was. It moved her to the shedding of tears. This effect was in part produced, I suppose, by American habits of feeling, as pertaining to a republican government. To see a gray haired man of seventy-five years, kneeling down, in a large assembly, to kiss the hand of a young woman, is a sight for which institutions essentially democratic do not prepare a spectator of either sex and must naturally place the opinions upon which a republic is founded and the sentiments which support it in strong contrast with a government based and upheld as ours is."

Pineapples.

The pineapple is a solidified blossom, say the horticultural experts, and it is pineapple blossom time from June to October in Hawaii, where 7,000 acres are given over to the cultivation of this fruit. Pineapples are planted in three ways—for shipment raw, for canning and for juice. If the planter wants large, perfect specimens of the fruit he sets about 5,000 plants to the acre. The uniform smaller disks that you find in the cans are the result of closer planting, while the planter who desires only juice sets his plants still closer.—Youth's Companion.

"Well, how much do I owe you?" asked the man.

"Nothing," answered the jeweler. "This isn't a professional treatment. This is a coroner's inquest."

POLICE RAIDED A SUNDAY CRAP GAME

Eleven young men were tendered an unpleasant surprise party on Sunday afternoon by Policemen Shader and Walker, who rounded up ten of the party and escorted them to the city hall, where they were fined $1 each by Recorder Lang on a charge of shooting crap. The case was held open for a week to allow them to settle for the damage done to the house in which they were holding the party.

The round up of the crap shooters was due to Sergeant Hanley having received a telephone complaint that afternoon from Michael Reis, agent for John Benjamin of Windham, who owned the property at No. 284 South Wall street, vacant at the present time. The sergeant sent the two officers to the scene and they stole in unobserved until they were in the room, when the players started up in alarm. Several, rather than be captured, took a flying leap through the windows, carrying sash and all with them. One escaped by leaping down a steep bank at the risk of serious injury.

Mr. Reis appeared to press the charge against the young men. At first a charge of unlawful entry was preferred, but upon the crap shooter's promise to make restitution for the damage done to the building, it was changed to disorderly conduct.

Just how long the young men have been using the empty house to hold crap shooting parties is not known.

SWORDS OF JAPAN.

Religious Rites in Their Making and a Final Blessing.

That the Japanese are past masters in the art of sword making is proved by the splendid weapons, equal to those of Toledo and Damascus, which they turn out. The actual methods of sword making in Japan are jealously guarded, an extraordinary feature of the industry being the religious ceremony which accompanies every process of their manufacture. The walls of every sword making shop in Japan will be found to be covered with allegorical representations of the sword makers and the chief goddess of the Shintos.

Evil spirits are kept away by charms consisting of bits of paper and wisps of straw, while, should any woman enter the shop, disaster would certainly come to the swords that are being made and to their wielders. Consequently women are absolutely debarred from entering business as sword makers, while not only is prayer offered up before the work begins, but various religious rites peculiar to the Japanese are performed in order that the swords, when finally completed, may be said to have been well and truly made.

Even the final processes of polishing and sharpening are characterized by certain religious ceremonies, and final certain weapons are offered, one by one, to the sword god to be blessed. This ceremony consists in placing the sword in front of the goddess of the Shintos on the wall, with an offering of sake, rice and sweetmeats, after which prayer scrolls are read and blessing upon the work is invoked.—Pearson's Weekly.

KEEP IN HARNESS.

Why It Is Dangerous to Retire From Active Work.

In Farm and Fireside Dr. David E. Spahr gives some advice to workers who are planning to retire from their callings and enjoy a peaceful old age.

"The abrupt change from an active member of the producing class to an idle member of the consuming class," he says, "is too much for a man who is facing the setting sun. And just here is the excuse and reason for this article. I want to sound a note of warning to those contemplating such a move—'Safety first'."

"For a man in declining life whose arteries are already beginning to harden from indulging in rich and stimulating food the change should be made gradually, allowing his system to accustom itself gradually to the changed conditions. A lessened amount of rich and stimulating food should be indulged in. Regular hours must be maintained, regular exercises that will bring into play and actively all the different muscles of the body in order to insure the elimination of the waste products of the body."

"A sedentary life, inactive and purposeless, is nothing to live for, no object in itself but to live and eat and wait and waste away, with a lessened income and greater expense, with more and greater demand upon the purse strings—how great the temptation to become restless, nervous and irritable."

Tires Must Be Matched.

The Scientific American calls attention to a common cause of rear axle troubles, the same being the variation in diameter of different makes of tires. Though these are theoretically 34 by 4 inches, in practice they vary as much as half an inch and sometimes even more. Some of the results of the use of old tires are oil leaking from the rear axle case and the brake drum of the wheel with the smaller tire, difficulties in steering and tires wearing unevenly. The moral, of course, is that tires of the same type and make should be used on wheels of the same axle.

Hugo and His Disciple.

A young man, an admirer of the great poet, attended one of Victor Hugo's receptions, became engaged in argument and lost his temper. Hugo solemnly rebuked him, and he subsided. Presently the guests retired. One of them, however, had forgotten his umbrella and returned to get it. Looking through an open door from the vestibule, he perceived the young man on his knees before the poet, sobbing out his apologies for his disrespect, while Victor Hugo, with almost regal dignity, extended his hand to him and bade him rise.

R. L. Stevenson and Women.

It may perhaps be recalled that it was to the late Dr. Trudeau that Stevenson once admitted that he felt he had been rash when he promised a lady over the dinner table that he would put a real woman into his next book. "I've often wondered, Stevenson," said the doctor, "but never thought to ask, why do you never put a real woman in a story?" "Good heavens, Trudeau," was the reply, "when I have tried I find she talks like a grenadier!"—Westminster Gazette.

The Shadow of Death

What President Lincoln Did While It Hung Over Him

By F. A. MITCHEL

The following narrative is given exactly as it occurred with scarcely any filling in transforming it from ordinary parlance to the story form.

One of the saddest features of the war between the states was the arraying against one another of the different members of the same family. Such cases were more especially to be found on the border line between the United States and the Confederacy. In east Tennessee the prevailing sentiment was in favor of the Confederacy. All these states, however, were held for the Union by being occupied by Federal troops in the early part of the war.

For years the mutterings of the strife that was to come were heard in the land, and for months those who were farseeing began to fear that it was about to break forth. Then came the day of firing on Fort Sumter, and the people began to range themselves on the side with which they sympathized.

One day two brothers, Allmon and George Vaughan, bade each other good-bye in the town of Canton, Mo. Allmon's sympathies were with the north in the struggle about to take place, while George's were with the south.

"I am sorry, George," said Allmon, "that you are determined to take the Confederate side in this contest, but I grant that you are honest in your convictions. You are to be in the Confederate army; I shall fight with the Federals. I hope that we shall never meet on the field of battle."

"And I regret, Allmon, that you will not be convinced of the wrong the northern people are doing the south and that you will not join me in defending her. However, since I can't convince you we must part."

"Goodbye, George. I hope that we will both come out of the struggle alive and shall meet again here at our home, but something tells me that the war will be a long one and before that can be we shall both be exposed to terrible dangers."

Little did either of the brothers foresee the great danger that would befall one of them and the efforts to be made by the other to save him from a fate worse than death on the battlefield or under the surgeon's knife. George Vaughan made his way to the south, while Allmon was given a position on the staff of General Mark E. Green, an old friend of the Vaughan family.

About a year after the parting of the brothers George Vaughan determined to pay a visit to his home in Canton. Being a Confederate soldier, this could only be done secretly. Disguising himself, he passed the Union lines and reached Canton without his identity being discovered. He was received with joy, mingled with fear and trembling, by the members of his family. To Mrs. General Green, on whose husband's staff his brother Allmon was serving, he bore messages from friends in the Confederacy. Quite likely the lady was a southern sympathizer, for most of the women in the border states were on the southern side, even the wives of Union officers not concealing their preference.

When George Vaughan returned from his visit he was recognized by one who had known him before the breaking out of the war, and since he was known to have gone south to enlist in the Confederate army, and caught within the Union lines in disguise he was arrested and lodged in jail at Palmyra.

The record does not state that the prisoner was bearing information concerning the Union forces or plans to the southern leaders, but it is probable that he was. Having brought messages to Mrs. Green, it is quite likely that he took messages from her and perhaps to friends in the Confederacy, and it is not unlikely that there were written messages containing the contraband information.

George Vaughan was transferred from Palmyra to St. Louis, where a charge of being a spy was preferred against him, and a court was convened to try him. His defense was that he had gone to his home for no other purpose than to visit his family. Whether or no he was bearing information to the Confederates, having been caught within the Federal lines in citizen's dress was sufficient to convict him. At any rate, such was the result of the court martial, and he was sentenced to be shot.

Here was a singular case. The brother of a captain in the Union army was to be executed by the Federal officers. Allmon Vaughan heard of his brother's danger with dismay. There was but one hope for a man sentenced by a court martial, and that was in President Lincoln. John B. Henderson was then one of the senators from Missouri, and Allmon Vaughan appealed to him to use his influence with the government to help his brother out of the terrible position into which he had fallen. And yet there was but little hope, for during that war when a man was sentenced to death for being a spy he was usually executed. However, Senator Henderson began his efforts in behalf of the prisoner by laying the case before the secretary of war. Mr. Stanton made an investigation of the case and decided that the sentence of the accused was deserved and must be carried out.

Then Senator Henderson appealed to the president.

When George Vaughan returned from his visit he was recognized by one who had known him before the breaking out of the war, and since he was known to have gone south to enlist in the Confederate army, and caught within the Union lines in disguise he was arrested and lodged in jail at Palmyra.

The record does not state that the prisoner was bearing information concerning the Union forces or plans to the southern leaders, but it is probable that he was. Having brought messages to Mrs. Green, it is quite likely that he took messages from her and perhaps to friends in the Confederacy, and it is not unlikely that there were written messages containing the contraband information.

George Vaughan was transferred from Palmyra to St. Louis, where a charge of being a spy was preferred against him, and a court was convened to try him. His defense was that he had gone to his home for no other purpose than to visit his family. Whether or no he was bearing information to the Confederates, having been caught within the Federal lines in citizen's dress was sufficient to convict him. At any rate, such was the result of the court martial, and he was sentenced to be shot.

However, Senator Henderson began his efforts in behalf of the prisoner by laying the case before the secretary of war. Mr. Stanton made an investigation of the case and decided that the sentence of the accused was deserved and must be carried out.

Then Senator Henderson appealed to the president.

Mr. Lincoln during the war was regarded by those high in command as a stumbling block to military discipline. So tender hearted was he that he could not refrain from interfering in the case of deserters from the Union army and such persons on the Confederate side as were caught smuggling contraband goods or information into the south. Often, where the accusations were clearly proved, the president would defeat justice by a pardon. It is related that Secretary Stanton, to whom was given great power to thwart this interference on the part of the president, on presentation of an order from Mr. Lincoln in behalf of some luckless individual would tear it up, thus declining to respect it. But in this case the president overruled the secretary and ordered a new trial for the condemned man.

The hopes that were raised in Allmon Vaughan by this interference were doomed to disappointment. The officers of the court, refusing to permit their feelings to influence them, returned a second verdict of guilty. Again the president was appealed to, and again he ordered another trial, and again the same verdict was returned.

Naturally these three trials consumed a great deal of time, and when the last verdict was returned the spring of 1865 had opened, and the end of the war was in sight. Senator Henderson refused to be discouraged. There was one means of saving George Vaughan's life that had not been utilized. President Lincoln possessed the pardoning power in such cases, and the senator resolved to make an effort in that direction.

Visiting the White House, he obtained access to the kind hearted president and solicited a pardon for the condemned Confederate, urging the fact that the war was practically over and such an act of clemency would go far to bringing the Confederates of Missouri back into the Union fold.

"See Stanton," said Mr. Lincoln, "and tell him that this man must be released."

"I have seen him," replied the senator, "and he will do nothing."

"See him again," said the president, "and if he will do nothing come back to me."

Again Senator Henderson sought the iron secretary, who set his square jaws and refused to interfere with the verdict of the court martial. Had Allmon Vaughan known of this final effort to save his brother from an ignominious death and of the shadow that was then hanging over the only man who could save him he would have lost all hope.

It was the 14th of April, 1865. Senator Henderson called upon the president to report the issue of his final effort with the secretary of war. The senator was shown to Mr. Lincoln's private room, where he found him dressing for the theater.

"Mr. Stanton will do nothing," said Henderson. "There is no hope."

Mr. Lincoln shook his head; then without a word he seated himself at a desk and, taking up pen and paper, began to write.

No other such scene fraught with life and death occurred during those dark days of war. Placed on canvas by an artist it would be: The long, gaunt president, sitting at his desk about to write a pardon for one of his country's enemies, his face wearing an expression of magnanimity. Near by would stand the senator, silently wondering what the writing would be and hoping for victory. Overlooking the president is the Shadow of Death, wearing a mingled expression of disappointment and satisfaction—disappointment at being cheated out of one victim, satisfaction at the certainty of securing a far more important one in the man who was robbing him of the other.

When Mr. Lincoln had written a few lines he handed the paper to the senator. Henderson scanned it with a look of mingled pleasure and triumph. It was a pardon for George Vaughan and an order for his release.

Having expressed his gratitude to Mr. Lincoln the senator hurried to the telegraph to flash the good news to Missouri, relieving the strain on the condemned Confederate and gladden the hearts of his brother and others who loved him.

But the president, shortly after this act of mercy, descended to a carriage and was driven to the theater and while sitting in his chair, possibly thinking rather of the life he had spared than the play, was sent to his long home by one who thought he served the same cause as the man he had pardoned.

Half a century has passed since the tender hearted president was martyred. There have been many anecdotes told of him, but none so affecting as this writing of a pardon for a Confederate officer and going directly to his death at the hands of Booth. We have Mr. Lincoln's speech at the dedication of the field of Gettysburg. Every day is advancing Mr. Lincoln in the admiration and the hearts of the civilized world. Beside his impressive words should stand this last act of his life from which the pardoner went to his own death. His words of consecration on the battlefield were long in being recognized for their true value and in finding the place among men they occupy today. Perhaps at some future date this last official act—an act of clemency—may take its place beside his words at Gettysburg.

One of Nature's Show Places. Ogden canyon, a deep cleft through the towering Wasatch mountains, overlooking the Great Salt lake, is one of nature's show places, cut in the solid rock by the river which runs through it, the rushing water, from prehistoric times, carrying quantities of sand and gravel which simply filled out the present wonderful canyon. Ogden river was flowing west along its present course before the lofty Wasatch mountains came into existence. The raising of the mountains went on slowly for ages, so slowly that the river kept its place by cutting down its ever rising bed. In no other way can scientists rationally account for a river rising on one side of the range and flowing directly across it.—Argonaut.

Beating Off a Dog. If a dog springs for a man the latter should guard his face with his arm and try to meet the animal with his forearm. With his right hand he should attempt to catch one of the animal's front paws. The paw of a bulldog is ultra sensitive. If it can be caught a vigorous squeeze will make the animal howl for mercy and retire discomfited.

"THE GROUND GRIPPER" SURGICAL SHOE

Is the Original Muscle Developing Health Shoe
COMFORT FOR ALL FEET

As a rule, changes in orthopedic shoeing are brought about by the slow process of evolution, and the conservative physician is never willing to make a radical change from the old method to the new until the advantages of the new have been firmly established by years of trial.

In the application of our "GROUND GRIPPER" shoe, the right conditions have been met, and the rapidity with which it is being adopted by eminent medical men proves it to be an assured success. In presenting some of the features of our "GROUND GRIPPER" shoe, we feel that we are calling your attention to one of the most important necessities of life.

Doctors have spent much of their time trying to find a shoe that would take the place of MECHANICAL APPLIANCES or ARTIFICIAL SUPPORTS, such as PLATES or STEEL SHANKS, commonly called "props for the feet," which are so rigid and unyielding that they WEAKEN instead of STRENGTHEN the muscles of the feet.

Everyone who enjoys walking, or has to stand on their feet most of the time, will find this shoe a source of rest, and practical cure for foot troubles.

BAERS' HOME NOT A PEACEFUL PLACE

Recorder Lang Hears of Fears and Tears of Chambers Street Couple and Sends Family Head to Jail.

A "Baer hunt" was brought to the attention of Recorder Lang this morning in recorder's court where Abram Baer, 26 Chambers street, was arraigned for trial on a charge brought by his wife of having chased her with a butcher knife, and at the close of the trial the recorder sentenced Hunter Baer to three days in jail. This is the third or fourth time the matrimonial difficulties of the Baers have been brought to the attention of the recorder, but heretofore the wife has withdrawn the charge.

The events that led up to the present chapter in the domestic tribulations of the Baers occurred some time ago when Mrs. Baer claimed that her husband came home one night and there was no supper ready as there was nothing to cook. When she asked him for some money, she claimed he picked up a butcher knife and chased her out of the house. She had him arrested a week ago and the case was adjourned until this morning. During the past week the husband and wife had not lived together, but the husband has kept her supplied with food.

This morning she appeared in court carrying her baby and determined to press the charge against her husband. Mr. Baer was represented by Chris. J. Flanagan whom he had retained to look after his interests.

Husband Talked and Baby Cried.

Mr. Baer when he took the stand kept up a continual stream of conversation and several times the recorder had to rap for order. To add to the confusion, Baer's baby did not like to be carried around by the mother and started crying so that the mother had to leave the court room to quiet the baby.

Afraid of Each Other.

Baer said he was sometimes afraid of his wife. She had a habit after he got in bed, to take her hair down and sit down on the bed and act strange. In imitation of how his wife acted, Baer turned his head rapidly from side to side in the same manner he said, his wife did, and which he said scared him.

On the other hand, Mrs. Baer said she was afraid of her husband and would not sleep on the same floor with him.

Would Set Him Afire.

Baer said that his wife had threatened to pour gasoline on his clothes while he lay sleeping at night, and then touch a match to it and "up I would go, puff!"

Also he had had to have the gas turned off in the house and now was using oil lamps. This was due to the fact that he was afraid his wife would blow out the gas some night on purpose and he would smother to death from the fumes.

He Never Abused Her.

He said that his wife was in the habit of running out of the house to give the neighbors the impression that he was abusing her and that the neighbors had got so now that they don't believe her.

He said she would also throw things on the floor to give the impression that he was throwing furniture at her.

Not So Said Mrs. Baer.

Mrs. Baer on the other hand denied Mr. Baer's stories as to her conduct. Her husband said that he did not have a butcher knife in the house and had not chased his wife with one as she complained he did, but Mrs. Baer said it was true that he chased her with a knife.

Found Guilty.

At the close of the case Recorder Lang found Baer guilty and sentenced him to three days at the county hotel.

Exploding Ice.

To make a piece of ice explode the first step is to put on a plate a lump of clear ice about as large as your fist. Then with a reading glass or the lens of a magnifying glass focus the sun's rays so that the bright spot of light is exactly in the center of the lump. In a little time the ice will begin to melt from the inside, and after a few moments a small cavity will appear. For the ice, having expanded in freezing, will not take up so much room when melted. The cavity, being entirely surrounded by ice, will be a partial vacuum, filled with a watery vapor of very low pressure. When you have melted a large cavity lay the glass aside and let the ice melt in the sun. Turn it occasionally so that it will be sure to melt evenly round the cavity. After awhile the cavity will be surrounded by a thin shell of ice. Then, because of the great pressure on the outside about fifteen pounds to the square inch, the thin walls will suddenly collapse, and the ice will fly in all directions.—Youth's Companion.

Theory and Practice.

In theory you perhaps might attempt to pass through a pack of ravening hyenas with a fatuous smile on your countenance, a dove on your shoulder, love for every living creature in your heart and an olive branch in your hand. But in practice would it not be a heap smarter in you to tote a broad ax?—Kansas City Star.

True Humility Seldom Found.

Humility does not consist in anything that is merely outward, but its proper seat is in the hidden man of the heart. Mean clothes, houses and furniture, and very humble possessions, are, it may be feared, much more common in the world than truly humble hearts.—Jennings.

Wise Man Seldom at a Loss.

A wise man will make more opportunities than he finds.—Hazen.

HE THRUST GRIEF ASIDE.

Because He Was a Journalist, With a Duty to Perform.

Apologies of journalistic enthusiasm, Mr. Arnold Bennett furnishes a humorous illustration. He was twenty and a reporter for a small paper. An election had taken place in which his paper's candidate had been defeated and a brewer had won. His editor had given him instructions that if they lost he was to make fun of the brewer, and in any case to deliver his copy by 11 o'clock next morning. Mr. Bennett says:

"I attended the declaration of the poll, and as the elated brewer made his speech of ceremony in front of the town hall I observed that his hat was stove in and askew. I fastened on that detail and went to bed in meditation upon the facetious notes which I was to write early on the morrow. In the middle of the night I was awakened by my venerable grandfather, who lived at the other end of the town, had been taken ill and was dying. As his eldest grandson, my presence at the final scene was indispensable. I went and talked in low tones with my elders.

"Nothing domestic could be permitted to interfere with my duty as a journalist."

"I must write those facetious comments while my grandfather is dying? This thought filled my brain. It seemed to me to be fine, splendid. I was intensely proud of being laid under a compulsion so startlingly dramatic. Could I manufacture jokes while my grandfather expired? Certainly. I was a journalist. And never since have I been so ardently a journalist as I was that night and morning. With a sense of the theatrical, I wrote my notes at dawn. They delicately exoriated the brewer.

"The curious thing is that my grandfather survived not only that, but several other fatal attacks."

WHAT IS STYLE?

It is Difficult to Define Because It is So Intangible.

What makes a woman stylish? Applied to dress, style is a curiously elusive quality, either to define or to acquire.

"A stylish garment," we say of one made in the fashion of the day. But when we ask, "What is the style of the garment?" we are inquiring for a description that may be of this year's style, or last year's, or of the last century's. A dress may be "in style" so far as its material, cut and trimming go and yet not look stylish when worn, either because it is worn by the wrong person or in the wrong way.

"A stylish woman," we say of one dressed in a la mode, and yet in the next breath we describe another woman as "good style," although she is not wearing the latest fabrics or newest cut and often is not herself beautiful.

Style is not a simple quality, but a compound one. "We say style," says an old writer, "of everything in which form or matter is conceived to be, in however slight degree, expressive of taste and sentiment." And it is taste and sentiment more than a specific mode that go to the making of style in dress—that intangible something so hard to define, so seldom acquired and so much desired because it is so widely admired.

The French word chic expresses, as Americans and English use it today, a good deal of what we have in mind when we say "stylish." It implies a certain knack in the selection and manner of wearing clothes. The meaning in French includes the idea of subtlety and finesse, and it is these qualities more than the elegant (striking) effect that are suggested by the best dressed women, so often lacking in those of expensively dressed Americans.—Good House.

Entirely Stopped.

It was at a big boxing show in Brooklyn that at the time for beginning the third round of one of the bouts the official master of ceremonies climbed through the ropes and from the center of the ring made this statement: "Gentlemen, I wish to announce that in the last round Harry Pierce broke his hand and is compelled to stop. He is therefore unable to continue. And so he will not fight any more tonight."—Saturday Evening Post.

The First Oyster Eater.

The gluttonous Vitellus is reported to have eaten 1,000 oysters at a sitting. "He was a very valiant man who first ventured on eating of oysters," King James was wont to declare, a sentiment echoed by the poet Gay:

The man had sure a palate covered o'er
With brass or steel that on the rocky shore
First broke the oozy oyster's pearly coat
And risked the living morsel down his throat.

Beautiful Fish.
Japanese gardens are almost like a part of the house. The people live in gardens far more than most Americans do. In almost every garden is found a pond with goldfish in it. The golden carp is a kind of goldfish which was brought from China to Japan, and the species named panchu is greatly admired. It has a full nose of three or four fanlike fins that open and close. When floating about in the water and looked at from above it appears like one of the old Japanese gold coins called the koban. It is supposed to look like a lion, when one gazes straight into its face. The Japan Magazine tells us of these fish and says that the Japanese are fond of giving fancy names to their favorites, such as "dancing butterfly" and "double cherry blossom." Sometimes the fish take their names from appearance and sometimes from habits.

Austria's Historic Crown.

The crown donned by the monarch of Austria, which was made originally for Stephen of Hungary some eight centuries ago, has been stolen, lost or pawned.

One occasion it was pilfered by a queen who fled across the frozen Danube with it, and there, being in need of ready cash, she pawned it for 2,800 ducats. When it was finally traced and recovered it was placed in a fortress in Hungary and guarded night and day.

At the time of the revolution it was buried in a forest to prevent its being annexed by the Austrians, and it remained under the soil for nearly a hundred years. The crown is adorned with fifty-three fine sapphires, fifty good sized rubies, one emerald and 338 pearls. The gems are set in a mass of pure gold, and the crown weighs altogether about fourteen pounds. Exchange.

SOCIETY GIRLS TO MATCH THEIR CARS OF SPEEDWAY.

Miss Maria Lawrence Wetherill and Miss Katherine Dahlgren.

New York, Jan. 24.—"I want to go after the big records, I want to earn the title of the best woman driver in the country. If I win my first race, I mean to go record-smashing. I shall accept other challenges if I do." That was what Miss Maria Lawrence Wetherill, prominent New York society girl, had to say when it was announced that she and Miss Katherine Dahlgren may race their high-power cars against each other on the Sheepshead Bay Speedway this spring.

The race will be no novel affair. Each girl will have her own mechanic and will assume entire charge of her car during the contests. They expect to make 95 miles an hour.

Miss Dahlgren first won wide recognition as an expert driver last summer in the Berkshire Hills with her car, known as the "Little Yellow Streak." Three times in one week she was arrested for speeding and her license was finally revoked.

It was last August when Miss Wetherill first came to the front as another daring aspirant for the speed honors of the Berkshire roads. She challenged Miss Dahlgren then. The challenge has just been accepted.

Lotteries are against the law in the United States. They were prohibited by law in New York and Massachusetts in 1833, and in most of the other states in the next two decades. The Louisiana lottery was abolished in 1890, and the same year the United States congress made lottery advertisements and registered letters for lotteries in the mails illegal; in 1894 congress prohibited the importation of lottery tickets or advertisements into the United States.

KINGSTON, N. Y., JAN. 24, 1916.

It being a well-established fact that legislators eat and drink, the natural consequence is an investigation as to how much they eat and drink when the State pays for it. As an epidemic, the fever for investigation runs second only to the grip and the germ appears to have affected even Tammany Hall. The Thompson legislative committee probing the down State Public Service Commission, turned in expense vouchers for a $3,200 hotel bill which carried the names of members for various sums expended in food, lodgings and theater tickets. This was last spring and the long interim ensuing has enabled a pretty sizable wave of indignation to roll up among certain New York city members of the committee who ate and slept at home during the period covered in the accounts wherein they were charged with items for meals and rooms. Their consternation was succeeded by a personal investigation and now there is promise of a grand jury investigation. It reminds us of the story of the fish that had been hooked and then a larger fish bolted it. An even larger fish swallowed the second and so on. Of course, it is only a fish story, but reports indicate that some pretty big fish have been stirred into activity in New York.

Whether or not the State is going to get its butt back does not seem to be any part of the proceedings. It is true that the indefensible practice of charging up expenditures of public money in hit or miss fashion is not new. This committee expense item is not a flea-bite compared to the thousands squandered in gratifying Empire State vanity at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Another long-standing abuse in legislative practice is the professional mourning party that follows the death of a member, a committee being named to pay the last honors as well as the last cent of the considerable sums appropriated for that purpose. Such a graft is most difficult to eradicate. Investigating and junket committees are privileged institutions, no matter what party may be in power. Politicians are noted for thoroughness in expense matters. In the New York city eruption, the investigating committee should not only explain but should take the consequences. Its labors need not necessarily be terminated. Indeed, it might be a particularly valuable body to start on the trail of the expense vouchers of other legislative committees.

War, and the foreign trade expansion incident, thereto, have had their usual yeast-like influence upon prices for the necessities of life in this country and shoe leather is about to soar in the upward wave of food and wearing apparel. Foot and shoe manufacturers at a meeting in Massachusetts have predicted a price of 50 cents a pair in the near future for shoes this year. Leather is much higher and there has been a gradual increase in labor cost, according to the shoe men. The upward tendency of food prices has not been so striking as the sensational advance in drugs and all of these bear a direct relation to war's effect on the increased cost of living. Somebody has estimated that the increase in the prices for necessities this year, put at the extremely low figure of $10 per capita, would be a billion dollars a year added on to the country's burden of war. Everybody in the world has to pay his or her bit toward this war business. This country must do its part and the increasing cost of living shows one of the principal methods by which our citizens are paying the shot.

Athletics have come to be such a part of the big business of our universities that the announcement of Yale's athletic management going into the hands of receivers sounds so much a matter of course as to scarcely occasion comment outside of college circles. Disagreement over matters of policy between graduates and the student management is the cause for this step. President Hadley states that as long as the alumni advisers were harmonious and as long as the college had a large share of athletic success, the system operated by graduates and undergraduates worked well. When failure took its dismal course, however, and disagreements resulted, the receivership resulted. It is easy to perceive that Yale's misfortune is no different from that which would follow in any business wherein the same friction developed. It is too bad that the students were not given more opportunity to work out the salvation of their athletic management under adverse conditions. It takes failure to bring out stalling qualities. Instead of a receivership, President Hadley might better have put it up to the students themselves to face and work out their own problems, the same as they will have to do in later life.

In view of the serious condition of the National treasury it is amazing that the Roads Committee has actually reported favorably a House bill appropriating $25,000,000 for improving the highways. While this sum is big enough to make new taxes necessary, it is too small to accomplish the proposed purpose. In a forcible speech, Representative Edmund Platt of Poughkeepsie pointed out the fact that $25,000,000 comes to only $12 a mile for the roads which are to be improved, while "really good roads cost a thousand times that much, and even bad roads cost a hundred times as much." As Mr. Platt accurately stated, the bill is of the "pork barrel" variety. It has no redeeming feature. We do not see how any honest Congressman can vote for it.

LIVE STOCK HUSBANDRY

WINTER CARE OF HOGS.

Important That the Animals Be Kept Free From Parasites.

No one thing is more evident in the care of hogs in winter on the better class of farms than the attention now devoted to keeping the herd free from both external and internal parasites. There is no longer any question that a herd of hogs infested with worms, lice and other pests which sap their vitality are much more susceptible to attacks of hog cholera than those which are in healthy condition, says Orange Judd Farmer.

In the beginning of the winter season the hoghouse should have a thorough going over. First of all it should be cleaned, not in a casual manner, but with scrupulous care, and all litter, cobs and straw removed should be piled up and burned. The inside of the house should then be sprayed with some good disinfectant, preferably mixed with whitewash, which will at the same time improve its appearance. One man has the novel system for small hoghouses of piling straw inside and setting fire to it, the heat doing a thorough job of disinfecting. This is a somewhat hazardous method, however.

Duroc-Jersey swine are pork making animals of the highest order. They have good feet and the large bone necessary for carrying a carcass to market or to produce and tallow a large litter. They are excellent rustlers on grass and show splendid gains for feed consumed. The sow shown is a Duroc-Jersey.

New, clean straw should invariably be put in for bedding, and this should be changed frequently. The spray pump used for disinfecting should not be put aside until the next season, but should be kept in working condition and used every little while. It offers a cheap form of health insurance on the stock. The concrete feeding floor, concrete log wallow and the various types of dipping tanks all aid in keeping the herd healthier in winter. On some of the best hog farms the entire herd is dipped once a month regularly, regardless of whether any disease is present or not. This is a good, wholesome practice and not expensive.

The use of the hog oiler or oil rubbing post is another simple and very effective treatment which is particularly convenient, as hogs do all the work themselves and require no special attention.

CARE OF PREGNANT EWES.

Clover Hay and Roots Make an Excellent Winter Feed.

An excellent ration is composed of clover hay, two to three pounds, and roots, two to three pounds per day. This is sufficient except when ewes are thin, in which case a meal mixture also should be fed at the rate of about a half pound per day. A good meal mixture consists of oats, two parts; bran, one part, and linseed oil cake or peas, one part. Ewes lambing in February, March or April should be well prepared with the use of the above ration.

The most economical use of roughages is the secret of successful sheep feeding. If good clover hay is absent the cheaper roughages must be supplemented with grain. Pea straw, thrashed, is an excellent substitute for clover hay. Pea straw, thrashed, must be supplemented with grain. Five grass hays may require an addition of some grain in order to take the place of clover hay. It would be better to feed coarse grass hays to some other class of stock.

Ensilage may take the place of roots to within a month of lambing, at which time ensilage should be stopped and roots gradually decreased until after lambing.

For feeding sheep the roots may be either mangels, turnips or sugar beets, except in the case of rams, where turnips only should compose the root ration.—Dominion Experiment Station Bulletin.

Getting Sheep on Full Rations.

When grain has been fed while sheep are on pasture it is an easy matter to change from pasture to yard and put on fattening rations. Beginning with a fourth pound of grain daily, the amount may be gradually increased by a fourth of a pound the second week and so on. At the end of the fourth week the animals should be cleaning up a pound or more of grain each day. By the end of two months a daily allowance of one and a half to two pounds may be fed.

It is seldom advisable to feed more than two pounds of grain a head daily. The good shepherd watches his sheep and observes the first indication of bad appetite. When noticed he corrects the trouble at once by cutting down the food supply.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Tall effects in trimming are favored this spring. In fact, the taller the trimming the smarter the wearer. Flower clusters propped up with millinery wire is one form of trimming that is decidedly smart and new. Many of the hats are trimmed with loop bows of ribbon of one kind or another. The hat illustrated is rather small, with narrow rolling brim. The white grosgrain is arranged in an unusual manner, giving the effect of a helmet as it towered up. It is what a man has to do for a living that palls on him. If it were to become the custom for ball teams to pay rooters, it would not be long before there would be a rooters' union that would demand a reduction of innings, more wages and a pint of suds per capita between innings.—Houston Post.

INCOME TAX LAW UPHELD BY COURT

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, Jan. 24.—In a sweeping decision today the supreme court sets its seal of approval upon the income tax law as now administered by the government. The opinion was delivered by Chief Justice White in a test case brought by William R. Brushaber, a stockholder of the Union Pacific railroad. The court ruled in effect that every step taken by congress in carrying out the letter and the spirit of the sixteenth amendment to the constitution, the income tax amendment was correct. The constitutionality of the income tax itself was not questioned in the Brushaber case but nearly every detail of the law was challenged as invalid.

And the splendid service that we are able to render is, we believe, ample evidence of accomplishment.

Bigger stocks are embraced this year in our January Sale, and the greater worth in Home-furnishing values is not matched anywhere in this Old Colonial City.

The price-reductions are not the sole factors that make this sale the chief event of its kind—but the superiority of the home things themselves, their desirability, dependable construction, attractive pattern and fine finish. Hundreds of items are not advertised. Step in and look around.

Scolds Gagged With Iron.

In the seventeenth century erring inhabitants of Newcastle used to undergo a far more trying ordeal than that of the drunkard's clank.

Ralph Gardner in a work entitled "England's Grievance In Relation to the Coal Trade," published 1655, records having seen "In Newcastle six months ago one Ann Bridlestone drove through the streets by an officer of the same corporation holding a rope in his hand, the other end fastened to an engine called the branks, which is like a crown, it being of iron, which was muzzled over the head and face, with a great gag of iron forced into her mouth, which forced the blood out, and that is the punishment which the magistrates do inflict upon chiding and scolding women."—London Express.

Everybody's Opportunity.

How many people we meet who are living narrow lives, complaining of their lack of opportunity!

Take the woman who feels helpless, is that she does not know how to think—she has had no chance to study or to meet people of great interests and great purposes. Yet there are libraries—city libraries, county libraries, loan and traveling libraries, with all the wealth of the world's thought and experience, all hers for the taking. She may not know how to think great thoughts herself—comparatively few people do—but through a book she may live with some master mind until his thoughts become a part of her very life. It is not the mere reading of many chapters that starts the life growing—Youth's Companion.

Epsom Salts as a Dinner.

Five cents' worth of Epsom salts dissolved in a teaspoonful of water provides the nearest and most efficient "headlight dinner" for automobiles so far proposed, according to the Scientific American. The solution is used on the inside of the headlight glass, where it is allowed to evaporate. The result is a beautifully frosted lens, the frosting on which lasts for several months.

Really Serious.
The famous detective gasped as he arrived at the scene of the crime. "Heavens," said he, as he looked at the window through which the thief had escaped, "this is more serious than I had expected! It's broken on both sides!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Window Seat.
If you build a bay window in your dining room, do not put a window seat in it. In a dining room you would rarely use it, and it would be a shame to take up valuable space unnecessarily. Window seats are rarely comfortable, anyway.

Had to Break One.
"Bobby, do you know you've deliberately broken the eighth commandment by stealing James' candy?" "Well, I thought I might as well break the eighth commandment and have the candy, as to break the tenth and say 'covet' it."—Life.

Life and Character Reading

JANUARY 24.

Aquarius is the sign of this birth-date and the governing planets are Uranus and Saturn.

The horoscope shows an interesting and varied life. While possessing great dominating power of magnetism, this nature does not learn in early years how to use the electric forces given to Uranus.

By the cultivation of poise and self-reliance this nature will become a leader in whatever sphere it is found.

There seems to be no end of the energy and determination when this person is interested in a project, but if the project makes no appeal it is useless to urge.

Through a knowledge of the laws of harmony this nature easily becomes the master of its destiny, for Saturn, the planet in ascendency, gives power through harmony, but destroys ruthlessly in discord. Success comes through teaching, writing and any creative art.

Porters, machinists, railroad laborers will do well to search the Want Ads, which will offer them good positions during the coming month.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, Jan. 24.—The leading railway stocks were affected by general selling at the opening of the stock exchange this morning, due to the labor situation. New York Central fell 3/4 to 108 1/4, Union Pacific a point to 135 1/2, and Southern Pacific 3/4 to 100 1/4. Baltimore and Ohio, ex-the semi-annual dividend of 2 1/2, sold at 92, a net loss of . . . and Reading sold ex the quarterly dividend of 2 per cent at 80 1/4 at the start and then declined to 80 in the next few minutes. Fractional losses were sustained in Great Northern, Erie and Lehigh Valley. The copper stocks were in good demand, Anaconda advancing 1/4 to 88 1/4 and Utah and Miami made fractional gains. Steel Common started 1/4 higher at 84 1/4 and then yielded to 83 1/4. Mexican Petroleum dropped a point to 109 1/4. Industrial Alcohol reflected renewed accumulation, rising 3 points to 165. Texas Company gained a point to 210 1/4. Great Northern Ore receded 3/4 to 47 1/4.

Selling of the railway issues continued throughout the late forenoon and declines ranging from fractions to over a point were sustained in some of these issues. Baltimore and Ohio declined 1/4 further to 91 1/4 and fractional losses were sustained in Erie, New York Central, Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania and St. Paul. Marine preferred fell from 8 1/4 to 8 1/4 and American Can, after selling at 63 1/4, declined to 62. Great Northern Ore was the weakest of the minor industrials, falling 1 1/4 to 46 1/4. Colorado Fuel and Iron receded a point to 45 1/4. The copper issues lost most of their early gains, Tennessee dropping from 56 1/4 to 55 1/4.

Trading during the late afternoon was governed chiefly by prospects of a dividend being declared in Steel Common. This stock, after selling at 82 1/4, rose to 83 1/4. Many other issues rallied sharply, Industrial Alcohol advancing from 158 1/4 to 162 1/4, Southern Pacific, after selling at 100 1/4, rose to 100 3/4. Goodrich Rubber was in good demand, rising 1 1/4 to 47 1/4.

The closing was strong. A more hopeful feeling with regard to the steel dividend outlook caused an improvement in the last hour. Steel common rallied a point from the low and similar gains occurred in Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and New York Central. Industrial Alcohol made a further gain of a point to 163. Recoveries were made in the list as the session ended. Government bonds unchanged; others strong.

Hotel Martini

The Inside of the Hotel

Is the part that counts with the guest. The architect doesn't make a hotel, he only designs it. The builder doesn't make a hotel, he only builds it.

Don't select your stopping place from the outside. Look behind the front wall and see what is back of it.

The success of the Hotel Martini is the personality back of it, which shows in the lobby, at the desk, in the restaurants and in the rooms.

The telephone attendants, the mail clerks, the room maids, even the bellboys reflect the personality back of the "House of Taylor." We don't preach prices only. We have pleasant, homelike rooms from $1.50 up.

In one and all you will find reflected the careful and consistent idea of guest-service that dominates every moment of your stay.

Located in the Heart of Things, only a golf stroke from the Pennsylvania Depot. On Broadway's shopping centre. The Martini is the logical New York home for those on business or pleasure bent.

Later Day Sayings of Benjamin Franklin

"Since thou art not sure of a minute, throw not away an hour," declared old Dr. Benjamin Franklin in his celebrated almanac, and this is another of the wonderfully potent sayings of that hard-headed old philosopher which it would be well if the men and women of today would commit to mind and take to heart and put into practice.

While this saying might possibly have been intended to apply principally to the ethical, or religious, side of humanity, it is not impossible that the old philosopher had in mind his bearing upon commercial activities. For he was always urging hard work and thrift upon the youth of his day, and his great business insight surely showed him that his statement could be applied to business with as much good cause as to morality.

Now there is hardly a business transaction possible in which, if it is not gone about in the right way, not only minutes but hours and whole days are wasted and literally thrown away.

Even in the small matter of hiring household helpers, how many times have you seen a woman foolishly tramping all over the city from one intelligence office to another, from house to house, seeking a cook, or a waitress, or a laundress, or what-not, and doing this day after day before being satisfied in her need?

Now, all that is foolish waste of time and energy, both nervous and physical, and consequently there is a loss of money.

In the real world, too, have you not often seen men spend whole months trying to buy, rent, sell or exchange property by old-fashioned methods, and all the while the property is depreciating in value and eating up taxes?

All this can be avoided by saving not only years and months and weeks and days, but minutes and sometimes seconds, by letting the Want Ads attend to your business for you. They cost but a few cents, but they work quickly and efficiently and save time and money.

Start in this new year of 1916 with the firm resolve that you will take Dr. Franklin's advice by reading the Want Ads daily and using them often.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York is afflicted with skating madness. It seems that every man, woman and child in the greater city wants to do some ice skating.

The "400" has taken it up and as a fad it has pushed tangoing far into the background. On many of the hotel roofs there are artificial rinks and the ice is crowded from early morning until late at night.

St. Nicholas Rink, the only big artificial ice arena in the city is turning away thousands of persons daily. Last year and in other years the St. Nick never was more than comfortably filled except on college hockey game night. But this winter it could fill a space 20 times its present size.

There are several other enclosed rinks in the city but they are woefully inadequate to accommodate the crowds and some new rinks are being rushed to completion.

Skate Makers Reap Harvest

Several times so far this winter it has been cold enough to freeze a skating surface on some of the shallow ponds in greater New York. This happening was greeted by the outpouring crowds so large that the city authorities, in many cases, had to order thousands of skaters off the ice fearing the weight too great for the thin coating.

"Our income from the sale of skates this year will be at least five times as great as last year—probably ten times," said a skating supply dealer recently. "We estimate that there are over 600,000 skaters this year in New York and Brooklyn in comparison with 75,000 or 100,000 last year."

"Last year the supply stores in New York and Brooklyn sold 25,000 pairs of skates. So far this winter the dealers have sold approximately 400,000 pairs of skates."

$6,000,000 For Costumes.

"The best part of it, from our viewpoint, is that New York's most exclusive society people have become inoculated with the skating fever. That means handsome profits for us because those people are not content with the cheap or middle priced skates. They want the very best and are willing to pay any price. Our profits on some sales are around 200 per cent."

In the olden days the girls and boys and the men and women were content to skate garbed in ordinary togs only. But that isn't New York's way this year.

A skating scene on the top of the big hotels and even in the ordinary rinks is a scene of splendor and magnificence in the display of togetery. None of the "buds" would think of skating without some dazzling skating regalia; nor would their mamas. As a result the dressmakers in town are overwhelmed with orders for skating costumes.

It is estimated that at least $6,000,000 already has been paid out by the wealthy women skaters for skating outfits—and the end isn't yet.

Incidentally, the youths who used to make their living giving dancing lessons have taken up another trade. It's that of skating instructor. And they're finding it as lucrative as was the trade of teaching the dancing twists.

Hockey Popularity Growing.

Hockey has come to the fore this season with a whirlwind rush. The college teams have been playing it for a number of years at St. Nicholas Rink and every game has drawn capacity crowds. The St. Nicholas League games, which bring together some of the greatest hockey players in the world, also provide many thrills for the crowds.

In many parts of the city small leagues have sprung up and the games are scheduled on the ponds and lakes whenever the weather is cold enough to coat the ponds with two or more inches of ice.

New Theme of "Poison Pen."

Monticello has a "poison pen" letter writer whose specialty is the writing of letters notifying business men how the various proprietors are being dealt with by their clerks. Several merchants have received letters from this source signed "A Friend." Among those who have received them are Walter H. Smith, butcher; J. H. Costa, vegetables; Richard Hall, for the S. L. Strong estate, groceries, and others. Some of the proprietors have had trouble with their clerks already over these letters, some of which point out to the proprietor instances where the employed are spending too much money.

MANOR STARS WON OVER E. KINGSTON

By great work on the part of Schriever and Newman in the last half, the Manor Stars on Saturday night snatched victory from the East Kingston team by a score of 18-17.

The contest was an exhibition of clever team work by both teams and was exciting throughout. With but two minutes to be played, W. Watzka was injured and had to leave the game. The score at that time was 16-16. Whittaker replaced Watzka, and after half a minute of play Newman received the ball and with a man on his back, landed a pretty overhead shot which won the game. East Kingston was given three chances from the foul line, Tierney being the only one to score. The summary:

If Joe Wilhoit, a Pacific Coast Leaguer, bought by the Braves last season, makes good next year, Fred Snodgrass, the former Giant, now with the Braves, will be eligible for the Grand Lodge of Baseball Scouts. HOCKEY'S BRIGHT STAR

Great Interest Being Shown In Sport of Ice Skating.

Hobey Baker, former Captain of Princeton, Football Team, Fairly Dazzles Canadians by His Brilliant Performances.

There was no sport of the year which enjoyed a better season than ice hockey. This stirring game awoke from a slumber that had lasted through several seasons and made an appeal to sport lovers which was heard throughout the land. It is fair to say that never before were so many persons interested in ice skating, and more especially in hockey.

New blood and new interest was instilled into the game when the Boston Athletic association joined the league and entered a team in the championship series. Not since 1900, before many of the present enthusiasts knew there was such a game as hockey, has a club outside of New York made a bid for popularity in this league.

The Boston team made a fight for the championship that will live in the history of the league. It lost in the final game against the St. Nicholas Hockey club, which won the title for the second consecutive season. The Bostonians beat the St. Nicks in a game in Boston, which, incidentally, was the only game the champions lost all year.

The two leaders were the only teams to win more games than they lost. The Hockey club and the Crescents were tied for third honors, with three victories and five defeats. The Crescents played an uncertain game all year. At times they rose to great heights, and then proceeded to plunge into depths. The Hockey club got off to a bad start, but finished well. The Irish-Americans were consistent in any event. They lost seven games and won one.

Harvard, although defeated by Dartmouth, was rated as the best team in the colleges. It beat Yale and Princeton. Yale defeated Dartmouth in decisive style.

Hobey Baker, former captain of the Princeton football and hockey teams, and the star player of the St. Nicholas team, was the sensation of the hockey league. He scored 18 goals during the season. In an international game with the All Star team of Montreal, Canada, which St. Nicholas won, Baker fairly dazzled the Canadians by his brilliant work.

GIRL IS CHAMPION SWIMMER

Miss Marguerite Brack of San Francisco in New York to Take Part in Indoor Meets.

Miss Marguerite Brack of San Francisco, champion girl swimmer of the Pacific coast, is in New York to spend the winter, and will take part in most of the season's indoor meets.

Her appearance in competition will be watched with interest. Although her best sprinting performances do not compare favorably with those of Miss Olga Dorfner of Philadelphia, the American record holder, she has to her credit a quarter-mile mark of 7:05, which brands her a most dangerous rival at the distance to the speediest flat swimmers in the country.

The presence of Miss Brack in the important metropolitan contests will give them national rank, for Miss Dorfner is also a promised starter.

Some Authors and Their Names.

There are authors who make the most of their names, and there are others who don't. When W. W. Jacobs was commencing his literary career and hoping to "make a name" why did he not make the best of the one he got at the font? What a splash he could have made with William Wymark Jacobs!

It is almost as bad as Gilbert's neglected name, which was Schwenn. But perhaps that was too near "swank" for a modest man. Rutherford Crockett would have served the author of "The Stick Minister" well, but he was content with S. R. Sir Arthur Pinero's second name is Wing. Silas Hocking's is Kitto. Jerome K. Jerome's is Klapka, and Gilbert Chesterton's "K" stands for Keith. Charles Dickens was christened Charles John Huffham.

It is a remarkable fact that nearly all the greater novelists are simply styled—Henry Fielding, Jane Austen, Walter Scott, Charles Reade, George Meredith, Thomas Hardy. William Makepeace Thackeray ignored his second name—St. James' Gazette.

What Becomes of That Cent?

A farmer comes to town with thirty apples, which he sells three for a cent, getting, of course, 10 cents for them. Another farmer, also with thirty apples, sells them two for a cent, getting 15 cents for his. They get 25 cents in all.

The next time they come in, with thirty apples apiece, they meet at the edge of town and put their apples together, making sixty apples. One man having sold two for a cent, the other three for a cent, they decide to sell them five for 2 cents.

They do so and when they're through find out they have received but 24 cents.

The problem is, Why did they not get as much for their apples selling them five for 2 cents as they did when they sold them separately, or, what becomes of the cent?—Columbus Dispatch.

Fire and the Lodgepole Pine.

Fire, the arch enemy of the forest, is the very life of the lodgepole pine, for the cessation of fires would in time practically eliminate the species from the forest. Following a sweeping fire it is found that the lodgepole pine is the first tree to work to make good its loss. On the blackened limbs of the fire killed tree are scores of cones stuck closely to the branches. With in these cones lie fertile seeds waiting for nature to set them free. The fiery whirlwind sweeps by, and in a few hours the brown bits of tissue-like seeds silently climb out of their

"Ough."

An exchange prints the following list of words ending in "ough" and adds the pronunciation of the more obscure words, so far as ascertainable from the dictionaries: Messers. Gough (goff), Hough (chuff) and Clough (cluff), though tough enough, thought through the day that they would visit Mr. Brough (broo), who, having a hicough (hiccup) and a cough, lived in a clough (cluff or clou), with plenty of dough and a tame cough (chuff) kept near a plough in a rough trough, hung to a bough over a lough (loch). A slough (sluff) of the bank into the slough (sloo) injured his thoroughbred's hough (hook).

No wonder the foreigner shudders at those four terrible letters!

Strong Even In Death.

A few tree almost destitute of branches or bark grows abundantly in the Caucasus to a height of from fifty to sixty feet and a diameter of a little over two feet. It grows slowly, but its timber is almost indestructible except by fire. It is considered superior in durability, appearance and toughness to mahogany, which it otherwise somewhat resembles. In some large forests of this tree it is very difficult to distinguish the live trees from the dead ones, the latter being very numerous and said to stand for 100 years after death without exhibiting decay.

POLICE RAIDED A SUNDAY CRAP GAME

Eleven young men were tendered an unpleasant surprise party on Sunday afternoon by Policemen Shader and Walker, who rounded up ten of the party and escorted them to the city hall, where they were fined $1 each by Recorder Lang on a charge of shooting crap. The case was held open for a week to allow them to settle for the damage done to the house in which they were holding the party.

The round up of the crap shooters was due to Sergeant Hanley having received a telephone complaint that afternoon from Michael Reils, agent for John Benjamin of Windham, who owned the property at No. 284 South Wall street, vacant at the present time. The sergeant sent the two officers to the scene and they stole in unobserved until they were in the room, when the players started up in alarm. Several, rather than be captured, took a flying leap through the windows, carrying cash and all with them. One escaped by leaping down a steep bank at the risk of serious injury.

Mr. Reils appeared to press the charge against the young men. At first a charge of unlawful entry was preferred, but upon the crap shooters' promise to make restitution for the damage done to the building, it was changed to disorderly conduct. Just how long the young men have been using the empty house to hold crap shooting parties is not known.

DR. ALBERT C. PERVELL, TSETSE KILLER. BITE VICTIM DYING SLAVES—DR. ALBERT C. PERVELL AND TSETSE KILLER.

New York, Jan. 24.—Heroic efforts are being made by New York physicians to save the life of Dr. Albert C. Pervell, the Brooklyn physician, who is a victim of the mysterious African sleeping sickness, and his aged mother, who has tirelessly nursed him for months. It is hoped that some remedy might be found that would stop the progress of the disease.

Since Dr. Pervell's unusual malady became known to the public, many physicians have visited the Pervell home and they are all amazed at the vitality of the Brooklyn physician who, for five years, has fought the disease that has now transformed him into a helpless invalid. Most victims of the sleeping sickness die within two years.

Dr. Pervell was an athlete, six feet tall, and weighed 200 pounds when he was bitten by the dreaded tsetse fly while he was visiting a Belgian Congo. The bite of this tiny insect has obliterated African tribes. No antidote has been discovered for the poison. Doctor Pervell's is said to be the first case reported in this country.

"Within the last fifteen years the sleeping sickness has killed more than 1,000,000 persons in Africa," said Dr. Louis L. Seaman, a specialist, who has made two trips to the Congo to study the tsetse fly and the sleeping sickness.

"It is possible for a man to be afflicted with the disease for two years before he is aware of it. The Rockefeller Institute is experimenting with the germ and good results are being obtained. No cure has been found."

SWORDS OF JAPAN.

Religious Rites in Their Making and a Final Blessing.

That the Japanese are past masters in the art of sword making is proved by the splendid weapons equal to those of Toledo and Damascus, which they turn out. The actual methods of sword making in Japan are jealously guarded, an extraordinary feature of the industry being the religious ceremony which accompanies every process of their manufacture. The walls of every sword making shop in Japan will be found to be covered with allegorical representations of the sword makers and the chief goddess of the Shintos.

Evil spirits are kept away by charms consisting of bits of paper and wisps of straw, while, should any woman enter the shop, disaster would certainly come to the swords that are being made and to their wielders. Consequently women are absolutely debarred from entering business as sword makers, while not only is prayer offered up before the work begins, but various religious rites peculiar to the Japanese are performed in order that the swords, when finally completed, may be said to have been well and truly made.

Even the final processes of polishing and sharpening are characterized by certain religious ceremonies, and finally the weapons are offered, one by one, to the sword god to be blessed. This ceremony consists in placing the swords in front of the goddess of the Shintos on the wall, with an offering of sake, rice and sweetmeats, after which prayer scrolls are read and blessing upon the work is invoked.—Pearson's Weekly.

KEEP IN HARNESS.

Why It Is Dangerous to Retire From Active Work.

In Farm and Fireside Dr. David E. Sparb gives some advice to workers who are planning to retire from their callings and enjoy a peaceful old age.

"The abrupt change from an active member of the producing class to an idle member of the consuming class," he says, "is too much for a man who is facing the setting sun. And just here is the excuse and reason for this article. I want to sound a note of warning to those contemplating such a move—'Safety first.'"

"For a man in declining life whose arteries are already beginning to harden from indulging in rich and stimulating food the change should be made gradually, allowing his system to get accustomed itself gradually to the changed conditions. A lessened amount of rich and stimulating food should be indulged in. Regular hours must be maintained, regular exercises that will bring into play and actively all the different muscles of the body in order to insure the elimination of the waste products of the body."

"A sedentary life, inactive and purposeless. 'Do nothing to live for, not object to live and eat and waste away and waste away with a lessened income and greater expense, with more and greater demand upon the purse strings, show that the temptation to become restless, nervous and irritable.'"

Tires Must Be Matched.

The Scientific American calls attention to a common cause of rear axle troubles, the same being the variation in diameter of different makes of tires. Though these are theoretically 34 by 4 inches, in practice they vary as much as half an inch and sometimes even more. Some of the results of the use of odd tires are oil leaking from the rear axle case and the brake drum of the wheel with the smaller tire, difficulties in steering and tires wearing unevenly. "The moral, of course, is that tires of the same type and make should be used on wheels of the same axle."

Hugo and His Disciple.

A young man, an admirer of the great poet, attended one of Victor Hugo's recitations, became engaged in argument and lost his temper. Hugo solemnly rebuked him, and he subsided. Presently the guests retired. One of them, however, had forgotten his umbrella and returned to get it. Looking through an open door from the vestibule, he perceived the young man on his knees before the poet, sobbing out his apologies for his disrespect, while Victor Hugo, with almost regal dignity, extended his hand to him and bade him rise.

R. L. Stevenson and Women.

It may perhaps be recalled that it was to the late Dr. Trudeau that Stevenson once admitted that he felt he had been rash when he promised a lady over the dinner table that he would put a real woman into his next book. "The often wondered, Stevenson," said the doctor, "but never thought to ask, why do you never put a real woman in a story?" "Good heavens, Trudeau," was the reply, "when I have tried I find she talks like a gremlin!"—Westminster Gazette.

The Shadow of Death

What President Lincoln Did While It Hung Over Him

By F. A. MITCHELL

The following narrative is given exactly as it occurred with scarcely any filling in transforming it from ordinary parlance to the story form:

One of the saddest features of the war between the states was the way in which it was being fought. It was a war of attrition, a war of the trenches, a war of the blood. It was a war that was being fought in the name of the Union, but it was a war that was being fought for the sake of the Confederacy. It was a war that was being fought in the name of the Union, but it was a war that was being fought for the sake of the Confederacy. It was a war that was being fought in the name of the Union, but it was a war that was being fought for the sake of the Confederacy.

For years the murrains of the strife that was to come were heard in the land, and for months those who were farseeing began to fear that it was about to break forth. Then came the day of firing on Fort Sumter, and the people began to range themselves on the side with which they sympathized. One day two brothers, Almon and George Vaughan, bade each other good-bye in the town of Canton, Mo. Almon's sympathies were with the north in the struggle about to take place, while George's were with the south.

"I am sorry, George," said Almon, "that you are determined to take the Confederate side in this contest, but I grant that you are honest in your convictions. You are to be in the Confederate army; I shall fight with the Federals. I hope that we shall never meet on the field of battle."

"And I regret, Almon, that you will not be convinced of the wrong the northern people are doing the south and that you will not join me in defending her. However, since I can't convince you we must part."

"Good-bye, George. I hope that we will both come out of the struggle alive and shall meet again here at our home, but something tells me that the war will be a long one and before that can be we shall both be exposed to terrible dangers."

When George Vaughan returned from his visit he was recognized by one who had known him before the breaking out of the war, and since he was known to have gone south to enlist in the Confederate army, and caught within the Union lines in disguise he was arrested and lodged in jail at Palmyra.

The record does not state that the prisoner was bearing information concerning the Union forces or plans to the southern leaders, but it is probable that he was. Having brought messages to Mrs. Green, it is quite likely that he took messages from her and perhaps to friends in the Confederacy, and it is not unlikely that there were written messages containing the contraband information.

George Vaughan was transferred from Palmyra to St. Louis, where a charge of being a spy was preferred against him, and he was confined to try him. His defense was that he had gone to his home for no other purpose than to visit his family. Whether or no he was bearing information to the Confederates, having been caught within the Federal lines in citizen's dress was sufficient to convict him. At any rate, such was the result of the court martial, and he was sentenced to be shot.

Here was a singular case. The brother of a captain in the Union army was to be executed by the Federal officers. Almon Vaughan heard of his brother's danger with dismay. There was but one hope for a man sentenced by a court martial, and that was in President Lincoln. John B. Henderson was then one of the senators from Missouri, and Almon Vaughan appealed to him to use his influence with the government to help his brother out of the terrible position into which he had fallen. And yet there was but little hope for during that war when a man was sentenced to death for being a spy he was usually executed. However, Senator Henderson began his efforts in behalf of the prisoner by laying the case before the secretary of war. Mr. Stanton made an investigation of the case and decided that the sentence of the accused was deserved and must be carried out.

Then Senator Henderson appealed to the president.

Mr. Lincoln during the war was regarded by those high in command as a stumbling block to military discipline. So tender hearted was he that he could not refrain from interfering in the case of deserters from the Union army and such persons on the Confederate side as were caught smuggling contraband goods or information into the south. Often, where the accusations were clearly proved, the president would defer justice by a pardon. It is related that Secretary Stanton, to whom was given great power to thwart this interference on the part of the president, on presentation of an order from Mr. Lincoln in behalf of some luckless individual would tear it up, thus declining to respect it. But in this case the president overruled the secretary and ordered a new trial for the condemned man.

The hopes that were raised in Almon Vaughan by this interference were doomed to disappointment. The officers of the court, refusing to permit their feelings to influence them, returned a second verdict of guilty. Again the president was appealed to, and again he ordered another trial, and again the same verdict was returned. Naturally these three trials consumed a great deal of time, and when the last verdict was returned the spring of 1865 had opened, and the end of the war was in sight. Senator Henderson refused to be discouraged. There was one means of saving George Vaughan's life that had not been utilized. President Lincoln possessed the pardoning power in such cases, and the senator resolved to make an effort in that direction.

Visiting the White House, he obtained access to the kind hearted president and solicited a pardon for the condemned Confederate, urging the fact that the war was practically over and such an act of clemency would go far to bringing the Confederates of Missouri back into the Union fold.

"See Stanton," said Mr. Lincoln, "and tell him that this man must be released."

"I have seen him," replied the senator, "and he will do nothing."

"See him again," said the president.

"And if he will do nothing come back to me."

Again Senator Henderson sought the iron secretary, who set his square jaws and refused to interfere with the verdict of the court martial. Had Almon Vaughan known of this final effort to save his brother from an ignominious death and of the shadow that was then hanging over the only man who could save him he would have lost all hope.

It was the 14th of April, 1865. Senator Henderson called upon the president to request the issue of his aid effort with the secretary of war. The senator was shown to Mr. Lincoln's private room, where he found him dressing for the theater.

"Mr. Stanton will do nothing," said Henderson. "There is no hope."

Mr. Lincoln shook his head; then without a word he seated himself at a desk and, taking up pen and paper, began to write.

No other such scene fraught with life and death occurred during those dark days of war. Placed on canvas by an artist it would be: The long, gaunt president, sitting at his desk about to write a pardon for one of his country's enemies, his face wearing an expression of magnanimity. Near by would stand the senator, silently wondering what the writing would be and hoping for victory. Overlooking the president is the Shadow of Death, veiling a mingled expression of disappointment and satisfaction—disappointment at being cheated out of one victim, satisfaction at the certainty of securing a far more important one in the man who was robbing him of the other.

When Mr. Lincoln had written a few lines he handed the paper to the senator. Henderson scanned it with a look of mingled pleasure and triumph. It was a pardon for George Vaughan and an order for his release.

Having expressed his gratitude to Mr. Lincoln the senator hurried to the telegraph to flash the good news to Missouri, relieving the strain on the condemned Confederate and gladden the hearts of his brother and others who loved him.

But the president, shortly after this act of mercy, descended to a carriage and was driven to the theater and while sitting in his chair, possibly thinking rather of the life he had spared than the play, was sent to his long home by one who thought he served the same cause as the man he had pardoned.

Half a century has passed since the tender hearted president was martyred. There have been many anecdotes told of him, but none so affecting as this writing of a pardon for a Confederate officer and going directly to his death at the hands of Booth. We have Mr. Lincoln's speech at the dedication of the field of Gettysburg. Every day is advancing Mr. Lincoln in the admiration and the hearts of the civilized world. Beside his impressive words should stand this last act of his life from which the pardoner went to his own death. His words of consolation on the battlefield were long in being recognized for their true value and in finding the place among men they occupy today. Perhaps at some future date this last official act—an act of clemency—may take its place beside his words at Gettysburg.

Voices of the Sea.

In "The Log of the Shark," by Chas. Kirtledge London, is this bit of sea description:

"The sea is not a lovable monster. And monster it is. It is beautiful, the sea, always beautiful in one way or another, but it is cruel and unkind of the life that is in it and upon it. It was cruel last evening in the lurid low sunset that made it glow, dully, to the cold, mocking, ragged moonrise that made it look like death. The waves positively beckoned when they rose and pitched toward our boat, laboring in the trough. And all the long night it seemed to me that I heard voices through the planking, talking, talking, endlessly, monotonously, questioningly, and I couldn't make out whether it was the ocean calling from the outside or the ship herself muttering, groping, finding herself. If the voices are of the ship they will soon cease, for she must find herself. But if they are the voices of the sea they must be sad sirens that cry, restless, questioning, unsatisfied—gaunt homeless little sirens."

One of Nature's Deep Places.

Ogden canyon, a deep chasm through the towering Wasatch mountains, overlooking the Great Salt lake, is one of nature's show places, cut in the solid rock by the river which runs through it, the rushing water, from prehistoric times, carrying quantities of sand and gravel which simply filled out the present wonderful canyon. Ogden river was flowing west along its present course before the lofty Wasatch mountains came into existence. The raising of the mountains went on slowly for ages, so slowly that the river kept its place by cutting down its ever rising bed. In no other way can scientists rationally account for a river rising on one side of the range and flowing directly across it.—Argonaut.

The Common People.

Coronets, miters, military display, the pomp of war, wide colonies and a huge empire are, in my view, all trifles, light as air and not worth considering, unless with them you can have a fair share of comfort, contentment and happiness among the great body of the people. Palaces, baronial castles, great halls, stately mansions, do not make a nation. The nation in every country dwells in the cottages, and unless the light of your constitution can shine there, unless the beauty of your legislation and the excellence of your statesmanship are impressed there on the feelings and condition of the people, rely upon it, you have yet to learn the duties of government.—John Bright.

Beating Off a Dog.

If a dog springs for a man the latter should guard his face with his arm and try to meet the animal with his forearm. With his right hand he should attempt to catch one of the animal's front paws. The paw of a building is ultra sensitive. If it can be caught a vigorous squeeze will make the animal howl for mercy and retire discomfited.

"THE GROUND GRIPPER" SURGICAL SHOE

Is the Original Muscle Developing Health Shoe
COMFORT FOR ALL FEET

As a rule, changes in orthopedic shoeing are brought about by the slow process of evolution, and the conservative physician is never willing to make a radical change from the old method to the new until the advantages of the new have been firmly established by years of trial.

In the application of our "GROUND GRIPPER" shoe, the right conditions have been met, and the rapidity with which it is being adopted by eminent medical men proves it to be an assured success. In presenting some of the features of our "GROUND GRIPPER" shoe, we feel that we are calling your attention to one of the most important necessities of life.

Doctors have spent much of their time trying to find a shoe that would take the place of MECHANICAL appliances or ARTIFICIAL SUPPORTS, such as PLATES or STEEL SHANKS, commonly called "props for the feet," which are so rigid and unyielding that they WEAKEN instead of STRENGTHEN the muscles of the feet.

Everyone who enjoys walking, or has to stand on their feet most of the time, will find this shoe a source of rest, and practical cure for foot troubles.

Lotteries

Lotteries are against the law in the United States. They were prohibited by law in New York and Massachusetts in 1833, and in most of the other states in the next two decades. The Louisiana lottery was abolished in 1890, and the same year the United States congress made lottery advertisements and registered lotteries for sale in the mails illegal. In 1934 congress prohibited the importation of lottery tickets or advertisements into the United States.

Wanted Help.

Four-year-old Mac had been playing with the hammer and mallet. Daddy, who is sometimes rather orn, called upon the youngster to be a bit. His best friend, a neighboring boy, was helping him search for it and said: "Try to think where you were when you played with it, Mac. Think hard." The boy, appreciating the gravity of the situation, replied most solemnly: "You think, too!"

BAERS' HOME NOT A PEACEFUL PLACE

Recorder Lang Hears of Fears and Tears of Chambers Street Couple and Sends Family Head to Jail.

A "Baer hunt" was brought to the attention of Recorder Lang this morning in recorder's court where Abram Baer, 26 Chambers street, was arraigned for trial on a charge brought by his wife of having chased her with a butcher knife, and at the close of the trial the recorder sentenced Hunter Baer to three days in jail. This is the third or fourth time the matrimonial difficulties of the Baers have been brought to the attention of the recorder, but heretofore the wife has withdrawn the charge.

The events that led up to the present chapter in the domestic tribulations of the Baers occurred some time ago when Mrs. Baer claimed that her husband came home one night and there was no supper ready as there was nothing to cook. When she asked him for some money, she claimed he picked up a butcher knife and chased her out of the house. She had him arrested a week ago and the case was adjourned until this morning. During the past week the husband and wife have not lived together, but the husband has kept her supplied with food.

This morning she appeared in court carrying her baby and determined to press the charge against her husband. Mr. Baer was represented by Chris J. Flanagan whom he had retained to look after his interests.

Husband Talked and Baby Cried.

Mr. Baer when he took the stand kept up a continual stream of conversation and several times the recorder had to rap for order. To add to the confusion, Baer's baby did not like to be carried around by the mother and started crying so that the mother had to leave the court room to quiet the baby.

Afraid of Each Other.
Baer said he was sometimes afraid of his wife. She had a habit after he got in bed, to take her hair down and sit down on the bed and act strange. In imitation of how his wife acted, Baer turned his head rapidly from side to side in the same manner he said his wife did, and which he said scared him.

On the other hand, Mrs. Baer said she was afraid of her husband and could not sleep on the same floor with him.

Would Set Him Afire.

Baer said that his wife had threatened to pour gasoline on his clothes while he lay sleeping at night and then touch a match to it and "up I would go, puff!"

He Never Abused Her.

He said that his wife was in the habit of running out of the house to give the neighbors the impression that he was abusing her and that the neighbors had got so now that they don't believe her.

He said she would also throw things on the floor to give the impression that he was throwing furniture at her.

Not So Said Mrs. Baer.

Mrs. Baer on the other hand denied Mr. Baer's stories as to her conduct. Her husband said that he did not have a butcher knife in the house and had not chased his wife with one as she complained he did, but Mrs. Baer said it was true that he chased her with a knife.

Found Guilty.

At the close of the case Recorder Lang found Baer guilty and sentenced him to three days at the county hotel.

Exploding Ice.

To make a piece of ice explode the first step is to put on a plate a lump of clear ice about as large as your fist. Then with a reading glass or the lens of a magnifying glass focus the sun's rays so that the bright spot of light is exactly in the center of the lump. In a little time the ice will begin to melt from the inside, and after a few moments a small cavity will appear. For the ice, having expanded in freezing, will not take up so much room when melted. The cavity, being entirely surrounded by ice, will be a partial vacuum. With a watery vapor of very low pressure. When you have melted in large cavity lay the glass aside and let the ice melt in the sun. Turn it occasionally so that it will be sure to melt evenly round the cavity. After awhile the cavity will be surrounded by a thin shell of ice. Then, because of the great pressure on the outside (about fifteen pounds to the square inch), the thin walls will suddenly collapse, and the ice will fly in all directions.—Youth's Companion.

Theory and Practice.

In theory you perhaps might attempt to pass through a pack of ravening hyenas with a famous smile on your countenance, a dove on your shoulder, love for every living creature in your heart and an olive branch in your hand. But in practice would it not be a heap smarter in you to tote a broad-knave—Kansas City Star.

True Humility seldom Found.

Humility does not consist in anything that is merely outward, but its proper seat is in the hidden man of the heart. Mean clothes, and houses and furniture, and very humble professions, are, it may be feared, much more common in the world than truly humble hearts.—Jennings.

Wise Man seldom at a Loss.

A wise man will make more opportunities than he finds.—Bacon.

HE THRUST GRIEF ASIDE.

Because He Was a Journalist, With a Duty to Perform.

Appropos of journalistic enthusiasm, Mr. Arnold Bennett furnishes a humorous illustration. He was twenty and a reporter for a small paper. An election had taken place in which his paper's candidate had been defeated and a brewer had won. His editor had given him instructions that if they lost he was to make fun of the brewer, and in any case to deliver his copy by 11 o'clock next morning. Mr. Bennett says:

"I attended the declaration of the poll, and as the elated brewer made his speech of ceremony in front of the town hall I observed that his hat was stove in and askew. I fastened on that detail and went to bed in meditation upon the facetious notes which I was to write early on the morrow. In the middle of the night I was awakened. My venerable grandfather, who lived at the other end of the town, had been taken ill and was dying. As his eldest grandson, my presence at the final scene was indispensable. I went and talked in low tones with my elders.

"Nothing domestic could be permitted to interfere with my duty as a journalist."

"I must write those facetious comments while my grandfather is dying!" This thought filled my brain. It seemed to me to be fine, splendid. I was intensely proud of being laid under a compulsion so startlingly dramatic. Could I manufacture jokes while my grandfather expired? Certainly. I was a journalist. And never since have I been so alertly a journalist as I was that night and morning. With a sense of the theatrical, I wrote my notes at dawn. They delicately excoriated the brewer.

"The curious thing is that my grandfather survived not only that, but several other fatal attacks."

WHAT IS STYLE?

It is Difficult to Define Because It Is So Intangible.

What makes a woman stylish? Applied to dress, style is a curiously elusive quality, either to define or to acquire.

"A stylish garment!" we say of one made in the fashion of the day. But when we ask, "What is the style of the garment?" we are inquiring for a description that may be of this year's style, or last year's, or of the last century's. A dress may be "in style" so far as its material, cut and trimming go and yet not look stylish when worn, either because it is worn by the wrong person or in the wrong way.

"A stylish woman," we say of one dressed a la mode, and yet in the next breath we describe another woman as "good style," although she is not wearing the latest fabrics or newest cut and often is not herself beautiful.

Style is not a simple quality, but a compound one. "We say style," says an old writer, "of everything in which form or matter is conceived to be, in the effect of all things, a measure of taste and sentiment." And it is taste and sentiment more than a specific mode that go to the making of style in dress—that intangible something so hard to define, so seldom acquired and so much desired because it is so widely admired.

The French word chic expresses, Americans and English use it today, a good deal of what we have in mind when we say "stylish." It implies a certain knack in the selection and manner of wearing clothes. The meaning in French includes the idea of subtlety and finesse, and it is these qualities more than the elegant (striking) effect that are suggested by the best dressed women, so often lacking in those of expensively dressed Americans.—Good Health.

Entirely Stopped.

It was at a big boxing show in Brooklyn that at the time for beginning the third round of one of the bouts the of deat master of ceremonies climbed through the ropes and from the center of the ring made this statement:

"Gentlemen, I wish to announce that in the last round Harry Pierce broke his hand and is compelled to stop. He is therefore unable to continue. And so he will not fight any more tonight."—Saturday Evening Post.

The First Oyster Eater.

The gluttonous Vitellius is reported to have eaten 1,000 oysters at a sitting. "He was a very valiant man who first ventured on eating of oysters," King James was wont to declare, a sentiment echoed by the poet Gay: The man had sure a palate covered o'er With brass or steel that on the rocky shore First broke the oozy oyster's pearly coat And risked the living morsel down his throat.

Clergyman—It is bad to lose a husband, madam, but I am sure that as he was such a good man he is happy where he is. Widow—Oh, but I know he isn't happy! Clergyman—Why? Widow—Because he said he could never be happy without me.—Indianapolis Star.

Beautiful Fish.
Japanese gardens are almost like a part of the house. The people live in gardens far more than most Americans do. In almost every garden is a pond with goldfish in it. The golden carp is a kind of goldfish which was brought from China to Japan, and the species named ranchu is greatly admired. It has a tall made of three or four fanlike fins that open and close. When floating about in the water and looked at from above it appears like one of the old Japanese gold coins called the koban. It is supposed to look like a lion, when one gazes straight into its face. The Japan Magazine tells us of these fish and says that the Japanese are fond of giving fancy names to their favorites, such as "dancing butterfly" and "double cherry blossom." Sometimes the fish take their names from appearance and sometimes from habits.

Austria's Historic Crown.

The crown donned by the monarch of Austria, which was made originally for Stephen of Hungary some eight centuries ago, has been stolen, lost or pawned.

One occasion it was pilfered by a queen who fled across the frozen Danube with it, and there, being in need of ready cash, she pawned it for 2,900 ducats. When it was finally traced and recovered it was placed in a fortress in Hungary and guarded night and day.

At the time of the revolution it was pawned in a forest to prevent its being annexed by the Austrians, and it remained under the soil for nearly a hundred years. The crown is adorned with fifty-three fine sapphires, fifty good sized rubies, one emerald and 333 pearls. The gems are set in a mass of pure gold, and the crown weighs altogether about fourteen pounds.—Exchange.

SOCIETY GIRLS TO MATCH THEIR CARS OF SPEEDWAY.

Miss Maria Lawrence Wetherill and Miss Katherine Dahlgren.

New York, Jan. 24.—"I want to go after the big records. I want to earn the title of the best woman driver in the country. If I win the first race, I mean to go record-smashing. I shall accept other challenges if I do." That was what Miss Maria Lawrence Wetherill, prominent New York society girl, had to say when it was announced that she and Miss Katherine Dahlgren may race their high-power cars against each other on the Sheepshead Bay Speedway this spring.

The race will be no novel affair. Each girl will have her own mechanic and will assume entire charge of her car during the contests. They expect to make 95 miles an hour.

Miss Dahlgren first won wide recognition as an expert driver last summer in the Berkshire Hills with her car, known as the "Little Yellow Streak." Three times in one week she was arrested for speeding and her license was finally revoked.

It was last August when Miss Wetherill first came to the front as another daring aspirant for the speed honors of the Berkshire roads. She challenged Miss Dahlgren then. The challenge has just been accepted.

Man's Heaviest Burden.

It is what a man has to do for a living that pulls on him. If it were to become the custom for ball teams to pay rosters, it would not be long before there would be a rosters' union that would demand a reduction of innings, more wages and a pint of soda per capita between innings.—Houston Post.

INCOME TAX LAW UPHELD BY COURT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Washington, Jan. 24.—In a sweeping decision today the supreme court sets its seal of approval upon the income tax law as now administered by the government. The opinion was delivered by Chief Justice White in a test case brought by William R. Brushaber, a stockholder of the Union Pacific railroad. The court ruled in effect that every step taken by congress in carrying out the letter and the spirit of the sixteenth amendment to the constitution, the income tax amendment was correct. The constitutionality of the income tax itself was not questioned in the Brushaber case but nearly every detail of the law was challenged as invalid.

PLANS FOR SUFFRAGE WORK.

Women of Kingston Effect Organization to Work for Ballot.

There was a considerable gathering of women of Kingston, interested in the cause of equal suffrage, at the home of Mrs. M. J. Michael on Saturday afternoon. Mrs. F. J. Shuler, former president of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, was the speaker of the afternoon, and gave an account of the suffrage movement in New York state, past, present, and future. Then followed the actual formation of a local organization, according to the most efficient ideas of the present time. These present adopted a constitution in conformity with the new State constitution adopted at the State convention held in New York city. This provides for local city committees, with boards of directors made up of officers and committees, that is a chairman four vice-chairmen, recording secretary, corresponding secretary, treasurer and four committees. In addition one woman representing each ward in this city will be chosen.

The officers as elected at Saturday's meeting, or appointed, were as follows: Chairman, Mrs. John Seating; first vice-chairman, whose duty it will be to have charge of the enrollment, Mrs. Simmons; second vice-chairman, who will look after the legislative work, Mrs. Michael; third vice-chairman, Mrs. Mary Gage-Day; fourth vice-chairman, Mrs. Carrie Holmes; recording secretary, Mrs. Hyman Roosa; corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. K. Moulton; treasurer, Mrs. N. D. J. Murphy. The name of the auditor will be announced later. The various committees will be the Press; House and Entertainment; Ways and Means; Membership. Scolds Gagged With Iron.
In the seventeenth century erring inhabitants of Newcastle used to undergo far more trying ordeals than that of the drunkard's cloak.
Ralph Gardner in a work entitled "England's Grievance in Relation to the Coal Trade," published 1655, records having seen "in Newcastle six months ago one Ann Bridlestone drove through the streets by an officer of the same corporation holding a rope in his hand, the other end fastened to an engine called the branks, which is like a crown. It being of iron, which was muzzled over the head and face, with a great peg of iron forced into her mouth, which forced the blood out, and that is the punishment which the magistrates do inflict upon chiding and scolding women."—London Express.

Everybody's Opportunity.
How many people we meet who are living narrow lives, complaining of their lack of opportunity!
Take the woman who feels helpless—she has had no chance to study or to meet people of great interests and great purposes. Yet there are libraries—city libraries, country libraries, loan and traveling libraries, with all the wealth of the world's thought and experience, all hers for the taking. She may not know how to think great thoughts her self—comparatively few people do—but through a book she may live with some master mind until his thoughts become a part of her very life. It is not the mere reading of many chapters that starts the life growing—Youth's Companion.

Epsom Salts as a Diemer.
Five cents' worth of Epsom salts dissolved in a tumblerful of water provides the nearest and most efficient "headache diemer" for automobiles so far proposed, according to the Scientific American. The solution is used on the inside of the windshield glass, where it is allowed to evaporate. The result is a beautifully frosted lens, the frosting on which lasts for several months.

Really Serious.
The famous detective gaped as he arrived at the scene of the crime. "Heavens," said he, as he looked at the window through which the thief had escaped, "this is more serious than I had expected! It's broken on both sides!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Window Seat.
If you build a bay window in your dining room, do not put a window seat in it. In a dining room you would rarely use it, and it would be a shame to take up valuable space unnecessarily. Window seats are rarely comfortable, anyway.

Had to Break One.
"Bobby, do you know you've just broken the eighth commandment by stealing James' candy?" "Well, I thought I might as well break the eighth commandment and have the candy, as to break the tenth and get 'covet' it."—Life.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
New York, Jan. 24.—The leading railway stocks were affected by general selling at the opening of the stock exchange this morning, due to the labor situation. New York Central fell 1/4 to 108 1/2. Union Pacific a point to 135 1/2 and Southern Pacific 1/2 to 100 1/2. Baltimore and Ohio, ex-dividend semi-annual dividend of 2 1/2, a net loss of 1/2. Reading sold at the quarterly dividend of 2 per cent at 80 1/2 at the start and then declined to 80 in the next few minutes. Fractional losses were sustained in Great Northern, Erie and Lehigh Valley. The copper stocks were in good demand, Anaconda advancing 1/2 to 88 1/2 and Utah and Miami made fractional gains. Steel Common started 1/2 higher at 84 1/2 and then yielded to 83 1/2. Mexican Petroleum dropped 1/2 point to 109 1/2. Industrial Alcohol reflected renewed accumulation, rising 3 points to 155. Texas Company gained a point to 210 1/2. Great Northern Ore receded 1/2 to 47 1/2.

Selling of the railway issues continued throughout the late forenoon and declines ranging from fractions to over a point were sustained in some of these issues. Baltimore and Ohio declined 1/2 further to 91 1/2 and fractional losses were sustained in Erie, New York Central, Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania and St. Paul. Marine preferred fell from 81 1/2 to 80 1/2 and American Can, after selling at 63 1/2, declined to 62. Great Northern Ore was the weakest at 46 1/2. Colorado Fuel and Iron receded a point to 45 1/2. The copper issues lost most of their early gains, Tennessee dropping from 56 1/2 to 55 1/2.

Trading during the late afternoon was governed chiefly by prospects of a dividend being declared in Steel Common. This stock, after selling at 82 1/2, rose to 83 1/2. Many other issues rallied sharply. Industrial Alcohol advancing from 158 1/2 to 162 1/2, Southern Pacific, after selling at 100 1/2, rose to 100 3/4. Goodrich Rubber was in good demand, rising 1 1/2 to 47 1/2.

The closing was strong. A more hopeful feeling with regard to the steel dividend outlook caused a slight improvement in the last hour. Steel Common rallied a point from the low and similar gains occurred in Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and New York Central. Industrial Alcohol made a further gain of a point to 163. Recoveries were made in the list as the session ended. Government bonds unchanged; others strong.

The Coterie.

The Coterie met on Saturday at the home of Miss Fuller. The general topic of the day was the second section of "Women in Art." Owing to sickness, only one paper was given but that was exceptionally full of interest and unusual information. Miss Hale had the paper, the subject being, "Commercial Art." The paper opened with a quotation from the late Commodore Vanderbilt in which he advised all parents to allow their children to follow out any particular bent toward any special occupation or vocation. It was then shown that commercial art, as developed in the past few years, offers an exceedingly wide field for the various phases of vocational work of this particular sort. Today practically all merchants and live business men recognize and employ the aid of commercial art. Scarcely one of our biggest industries but owes much of its success to this art. And its field of possibility is well nigh unlimited. Today the arts of lithography and engraving have reached real artistic eminence. While we are especially familiar with the names of Joseph Lyndecroft, Harrison Fisher, Charles Dana Gibson, Franklin Booth and others, women are also making a great success in this line of commercial art. Jessie Wilcox Smith, Elizabeth Shipman Green, Blanche Greer, and Clara Peck Williams, were a few of the women mentioned in the paper and interesting accounts were given of their activities. Among the concerns making use in a very large way of commercial art are the automobile manufacturers, and the luxury of their products is admirably portrayed by Gill Spear. "The Cream of Wheat Man," by Edwin Brewer was also noted. The paper told further how, about fifteen years
